A LIGHTNING ROD CASE—Another Worning.—At the present term of court there was tried the case of Battles & Webster against John A. Miller. In the summer of 1871, a company of men passed through this section of country vending and putting up lightning rods; also, A LIGHTNING ROD CASE-Another try vending and putting up lightning rods; also representing themselves to be agents of an Electrical Insurance Company. They represented to our farmers that by giving a note they would be required to pay the interest on it for the term of five years, then have it returned—paying only that amount for the insurance and the lightning.
