All right the rain had fallen, and the sky was low and gray,
When I saw the man who was waiting for me
Another day.
The tender leaves were all discolored,
The flowers were all withered,
Leaving together all in pain—
The end was near.
A heavy rain fell on the ground,
With a soft and gentle sound,
Lulled the pink baby's head, in its bed,
And the mother's heart was glad.
Such promises to be broken in an hour!
O wretched man!
Let me see the man, in his misery,
Revealed his face.
Sweet Nature turned to meet him, shaking for
Her foolish base,
A thousand times she kissed him in his joy
For all her tears.
So have I seen a babe, in his mother's arms,
How all his promise in a patient's name,
Not kept.
So have I seen the man of love, who has
On his heart the burden of a woman's love,
Without a word to say.

It would have been well for Stanton if he had been a better and a dumber. He would have been a martyr and his countrymen would have remembered him with reverence and honor. He was a man of great faith and great hope. He was a man of great love and great compassion. He was a man of great wisdom and great understanding. He was a man of great strength and great courage. It would have been well for Stanton if he had been a better and a dumber. He would have been a martyr and his countrymen would have remembered him with reverence and honor. His work was done and he died a martyr for the cause of the Union. He was a man of great ability and great courage. He was a man of great energy and great determination. He was a man of great faith and great hope. He was a man of great love and great compassion. He was a man of great wisdom and great understanding. He was a man of great strength and great courage. He was a man of great honor and great respect. He was a man of great glory and great fame. He was a man of great power and great influence. He was a man of great wealth and great riches. He was a man of great honor and great respect. He was a man of great glory and great fame. He was a man of great power and great influence. He was a man of great wealth and great riches.
