All the leads will accept as true what the New York Tribune says about the Democratic Senatorial Conference, and will thoroughly discredit the following saying of this Radical organ on the foregoing subject. The editor of the journal in question says:

Gen. Grant has vanquished the people of Louisiana again. He has been crushed by his generals and admirals. He has not the army and navy in his time, and the Radical Government of Louisiana, therefore, is there now by force. There was any doubt before as to the character of the usurpation which rules the unfortunate State by force of the President.

The question whether the people really sustained it is clear can be none now. The outrage stands out henceforth in its naked deformity as unpardonable crime against popular suffrage and the sovereignty of a State. A government which the people loathe and despise was forced upon Louisiana by the soldiers of the President. Both its themselves for a moment the people there is not and never has been the officers whom they have regularly chosen to rule. The Democratic Legislature was the legal, they were as helpless and powerless as children in the presence of the armed people. Any executive behind the bayonets of the United States they telegraphed to the President that the people have put on us what is your job, come now and put us back again.

Two years ago Grant climbed to the bad eminence of his disreputable third term, and violated bitterly at New Orleans to resist and were beaten by another and larger force, which a majority of the voters had given to the other side. That second defeat has brought with it still worse consequences. We have seen how the President has used the army of occupation to legislate at the point of the bayonet, expelling a legislature of Democratic majority, and putting in its stead a body of Republicans, chosen by the Returning Board, and recognized by the President as the only lawful Legislature of the State. The United States Senate has refused to recognize the Senator chosen by this bogus Legislature, and has declared that he was not sent to the Senate by the people of Louisiana. Nevertheless, the President has recognized him, and has sent his name to the Senate for confirmation. The Senate has refused to confirm the nomination, and has declared that the President would not be recognized as the head of the Executive Department of the United States. Nevertheless, the President has sent the name of Kellogg to the Senate for confirmation. Kellogg will not be confirmed, but he will continue to hold his seat, and to receive the salary of the office. The President himself admitted in a special message to Congress that the usurpation which rules the unfortunate State is not the government of the people, and he has not even attempted to claim that it is. Nevertheless, he has recognized it, and has sent a message to Congress that it is the government of Louisiana. Congress will not confirm Kellogg, but will not turn him out of
