"LETTING THE OLD CAT DIE."

Not long ago I wandered near
A grey-haired man in the woods,
And he said, with a sigh, "Youngster, life
Is but a mere nothing."

"Now let the old cat die," he laughed;
I saw him give a jump;
His face grew pale as he said,
"I would not make you."

But what he pushed, or where he went,
I could not tell; but I saw
On account of the threat of losing laughs
That bordered the place of death.

"The little white cat," he said,
Or long it upon a limb,
And left it to die all alone," I said,
"But I'll put the mischief with him."

I forced my way between the logs,
And what I did, but a sunny child,
With her bright hair brushing her cheek,
Her light hair flung to and fro.

She seemed like a bird and a flower in one,
And the forest her native place.

"Steady, I'll send you my child,"
But she stopped me with a cry;
"You say, 'I'll send you my child,'"
"The little white cat," I said.

"You say, 'I'll send you my child,'"
"The little white cat," I said.

"You say, 'I'll send you my child,'"
