It would seem that after all, the Senatorial expedition to Mexico, organized by Senator Cameron, of Pennsylvania, had somewhat in view an appeal to the Mexican government for the repeal of the Libras Zone. The protectionists of this country have been for years protesting on this subject, and they have succeeded in inducing the Government of the United States to renege with Mexico concerning it, and the Government is now doing as guilty an act towards poor and weak Mexico, which, if added to the other wrongs, would have an unwarrentable impotence. The history of the free district, or Libras Zone, explains itself.

Since the first report of the discovery of gold in the Black Hills, covetous eyes have turned toward that Territory, and the things which revolve around the Interior Department and the Indian Bureau are engaged in a scheme to appropriate the benefit of themselves and their confederates in office.

It was not until a late hour in the afternoon that Mr. Swett and Mr. Lincoln learned the melancholy truth that the unhappy lady had made a determined but ineffectual effort to commit suicide. Of course every precaution had been taken to guard against any attempt of this kind by her son and Mr. Swett, who has managed this most unpleasant matter with most commendable care and consideration.

When the President consented to that gross wrong, he identified himself with the President who had been elected to the office of President of the United States. He is now in the White House. After that experience, it is difficult to predict what the result of the present Congress will be. It is difficult to predict what the result of the present Congress will be.

Without saying another word to indicate her intention, she stepped out to the sidewalk, called a carriage, and stepping quickly inside, drove to the residence of Mr. Swett and Mr. Lincoln. She reached the store and called her order for the same ready compound, but the druggist arrived in time to prevent her receiving it, ever in the compound she had ordered. Still she looked at the druggist with a look of defiance, and finally called the proprietor, who suspected the real object for which the mixture was desired, and concluding wisely that a little strategy was better than an absolute refusal, he finally consented to supply her with the mixture.

The American merchants on the river have been arguing this matter on the attention of the Government, and the protectionists have been insisting that the United States should demand of Mexico the discontinuance of the free district. But Mexico has not done any thing on the contrary, she has enlarged the district so as to include within the trade of her cities on the Rio Grande nearly two additional States.

Mark Twain went to a great ball and met at Hartford, Tuesday, and lost his umbrella, for which he advertised in the papers, as follows: "Two hundred and fifty dollars reward. At the great ball on Tuesday, while I was engaged in burrowing, a small boy walked off with an English-made brown silk umbrella belonging to me, and forgot to bring it back. I will pay five dollars for the return of that umbrella in good condition to my house on Farmington avenue. I do not want the boy (in active state), but will pay two hundred dollars for his return. Samuel J. Clemens."

Mr. Choate and the Ambitious Boy.—A great many boys mistake their calling, but such are not fortunate enough to find it out in good season as this one did. It is said that Rufus Choate, the great lawyer, was once in New Hampshire, making a plea, when a boy, the son of a farmer, resolved to leave the plow and become a lawyer, like Rufus Choate. He accordingly went to Boston, called on Mr. Choate, and said to him: "I have your plea up in my town. I have a desire to become a lawyer like you. Will you teach me how?" "As well as I can," said the great lawyer. "Come in and sit down."
