CULTIVATING CORN.

The New England Farmer, in giving an account of a disension upon corn growing at the late meeting of Massachusetts State Board of Agriculture, at Haverhill, says: "Dr. Sturtevant touched upon a new idea or theory of cultivation of the corn which has not yet, to our knowledge, been very fully reported in the public prints.

"It has been considered, in years past, a bad practice to cultivate corn fields with a horse, after the corn roots had pretty much reached across the rows, for lear of breaking and destroying the roots which carry the fool to the plants. Frequent cultivation has been recommended while the corn is small, but cultivating up to the time a valuable consideration for their vote he may deem a valuable consideration for their vote against the bill.

In the case of Mr. Genter, or Philadelphia, the committee after carefully weighing the testimony of himself and Messra. Wanner, Miller, of Berks, Spicer and Stevens, members of this House, are of the opinion that his conduct was very indiscreet, but they are not prepared to say from the evidence in the case that he was guilty of any effort to corruptly influence any of his fellow members.

Your committee further report that as shown by the testimony of Mr. Pe-ped and said to him, "How is the boom bill this morning?" "Well," he said "I don't know." I said this to him is a sort of playful manner, knowing he had been somewhat alarmed about it before—I believe I said to him it is very natural—I believe I said to him that boom stock had gone up; that they were now paying $400 for the dereat of the bill. Then he asked me the question, who was paying it? I
