CAPT. ROBINSON'S STATEMENT.

In answer to questions by our reporter, Capt. Robinson said:

I was stationed at St. Louis from March 5, 1874, until May, 19, 1875. I was in command of the permanent troop, or general garrison, numbering 100 men. Gen. Grant's stock farm was located about nine miles southwest of St. Louis. General B. H. Grierson, superintendent of the general mounting recruiting service, St. Louis barracks, came to me with an order from Gen. Grant to detail me to go to his farm and there lay out a private race in the second of the general mounting farm and there lay out a private race in the second of the general mounting farm and there lay out a private race in the second of the general mounting farm and there lay out a private race in the second of the general mounting farm and there lay out a private race in cach year, and are allowed only one month's absence in each year, and are docked for that weep hour boyond it. The effect of this practice is seen all through the service is exposures of the fraud and rascality which have disgraced the country and made Grantism the wponents absence in each year, and are docked for that weep hour boyond it.
