THE REPUBLICAN.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, JULY 26, 1874.
MR. HAYES EXPLAINS HIS LETTER.

A round breakfast table set for two in a somewhat cramped and in a few moments, they had inquired of me, and I had inquired of them. The alleged debts of the Winebago were a supposition of mine, but I was not in a hurry to do so, and he would not buy, he did so; and where he could not buy, he had the creditor into employing him as an attorney to prevent it, representing that unless he was rejected, the claim would certainly be rejected. These arrangements complete, the traders held a meeting under Broadway's overshadowing and protecting wing, and resolved that some Winebago unmentioned owed each one of them a certain sum. This was altogether satisfactory to Simon, and he freely granted the certificates of the commission on the strength of these resolutions. It was not considered worth while to ascertain the name of the debtor. No items were required. No books, notes, memoranda, or other evidence of indebtedness were demanded by this liberal-minded commission. The claim would be stated thus:

"The Winebago was indebted to Dr. To amount due for lease on goods sold from 1867 to 1874, 1874, 1875, 1876, 1877, 1878, 1879, 1880, 1881, 1882, 1883, 1884, 1885, 1886, 1887, 1888, 1889, 1890, 1891,
