THE FLOOD OF YEARS

BY WILLIAM CULLER REVARD. A Mighty Hand from an exhaustless urn ours forth the here-ending Blood of Years oning the mations. How the rushing waves car all betore them! On their december edge and there alone, is Life; the Present there were and forms and fills the air with roar

Torsee and forms and fills the air with roar Of mingled noises. There are they she toil, And they she strive, and they who fenst, and the Who hurry to and fro. The stordy hind—Woodman and delver with the spade—are there, And busy artican beside hit bench,
And pallid stadent with his written roll.
A moment on the manning billows assn—The flood aweaps aver these and they are gone. There groups of prefers, whese brows are twines Will roses, ride the topunat swell awhile,
And, as they raise thoir flowing caps to touch. The clinking brim to brim, are writted beneath. The waves and disappear. I hear the jar Of beaten drums and thunders that break forth Frem cannon, where the airmoiding billow ands In to the sight long fire of arnest men.
Lat burry to the charge through flame and mid, layer and slain, in braps of bloody found.

Lat burry to the charge through flame and hid, layer and slain, in braps of bloody found.
Lat burry to the charge through flame and conduct the with his fellows; the head that wears he imperial dindem goes down beside the fellow's, with evuryond and branded sheek, funeral train—the forent sweeps away werers and bier and mouraners. By the bed four who dies uning gather serrowing, at women weep about. The flood rolls on; we wall is stiffed and the sobbing group are under. Mark to that skrill suffen shout—in ery of an applicating auditinele, tayed by some head-tonged orator, who wishin a living mass as if he were its wool.

I pause and turn my eyes, and, looking look here that turnsliseus field has passed, I see what interest can I have in filling my letters with attacks upon people of whom I know nothing and women, above all? And besides, even personal above all? And bosides, even personal reasons would prevent me from taking such a course. My colleagus, Comte de Brisbach, is married to an American lady, formerly Miss McCall, of Philadelphia, whom he married in Paris five years ago, and I am myself engaged to be very shortly married to an American lady. Is it likely, under these circumstances, that I should shander the women of a ration sect, whom the women of a nation, one of whom i shall shortly esponse? I care little for the other attacks, but I my very anxious to vindicate myself from the NEW SERIES-VOL. 17, W.S. 44. chapters of he ving impured the virtue
