THE REPUBLICAN.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, APRIL 30, 1874.

BYONETS AND ELECTIONS.

It is always delightful to see Blaine plunge into the partisan arena and how he wins among the political gladiators. It is detectable as an entertainment. It is better than a first-class circus; it surpasses a first-class walking match and is equaled only by Heesher's Sunday entertainments in which some call religious services. Blaine has such a magnificent dash about him, his incoherence and flashes his wit with a fascination that is irresistible, and even in the grander spheres of eloquence, he owns none as a master.

He is not in the capacity for making it most favorable for the Democratic Brigades of the Senate, and while he is on the floor he makes everything captive to his imperious will. But when Mr. Blaine illumines the Senate as he did on Monday, by exchanging invective and eloquence to make partisan music out of the tuneless chords of sectional strife, he suffers from his matchless eloquence of action is ended and people begin to think of what he has said that should be remembered and respected. As a satire on a detested rebellion, the speech of Senator Blaine was a grand success, but as an effort of statesmanship that must stand the test of the intelligent judgment of the country, it was a conspicuous failure.

It was beautiful as the rainbow while it lasted; full of all the exquisite of aggressive declamation; but when the show ceased, the beauty perished and in all the sunlight of popular reflection, nothing of the speech remains to guide the considerate citizen to a just comprehension of the issues discussed.

The country has never been apprehensive about the military power of the hands swarming in overwhelming numbers upon our more than forty millions of people. So much of Mr. Blaine's rhetoric was but feebly disguised demagogism. The fundamental principle involved is what the sober fathers of the Republic considered as one of the gravest questions affecting the safety and perpetuity of free government. If a single election poll or the election polls which may control a county or a district, can be controlled by the bayonet, the assault upon the free government is as deadly as if an army were to overrun every defensible State. It may all seem to be right to a desperate partisan leader while his party continues to control the bayonets and can thus employ them entirely on his side to control elections; but what would be Senator Blaine's answer if a Democratic administration should march a single company of Federal troops to the several centers of his Congressional district which decide the election of a Congressman, and exercise the arbitrary power of reconstruction days to arrest or intimidate voters so as to secure the defeat of the candidate of his party?

World Senator Blaine appear before the people of his State and answer: "What have the nearly a million of freedmen of Maine to fear from a hundred Federal soldiers?" No one who knows the able Republican leader will doubt that he would resist such a violation of the laws of his State and such an assault upon the freedom of elections, even to revolution if necessary; and when the hearers and readers of his late speech make such an application of his campaign deliverance to himself and his own district or State, all his eloquence and invective perish before the stubborn logic of self-interest.

In 1863 a company of Federal marines were marched to the polls in Philadelphia, under orders from the United States Marshal. There was no open resistance; but that single company of less than four score soldiers with gleaming bayonets, moved the city from centre to circumference, and there was but one voice that went up to the authority of the State in regard to it. Republicans and Democrats united as one people to demand that the bayonets and elections should be strangers to each other in Pennsylvania. The Republican Governor formally protested against the assault upon the freedom of elections, and a Republican Constitutional Convention have forbidden the presence of troops within range of elections.

Our militia are forbidden to parade on election day or to appear as military organizations, with or without arms, and any officers commanding soldiers to parade on election day is liable to fine and dismissal from office. Our new Constitution, framed by a Republican body and adopted by one hundred and fifty thousand majority, added to the old provision declaring all elections to be free, that "no power, civil or military, shall at any time interfere to prevent the free exercise of the right of suffrage." It is in no degree a question of the number of troops. There were less than a hundred in all Philadelphia in 1869, where one hundred and forty thousand voters could have disregarded them with impunity or vanquished them with a breath if necessary; but the bayonet as the symbol of the military power of the government made the whole Commonwealth rise up as one man and declare the sovereignty of the State and the freedom of its citizens. When the country forms from the eloquence of Blaine to the stubborn facts presented in a much less pretentious manner but with unanswerable power by Senator Wallace, the universal judgment of dispassionate men must be that the effervescence of the hustings, as offered by the aggressive Senator from Maine, is a sorry exchange for the statesmanship that should summon truth and soberness to the discussion of grave national issues.

The New York Times has been feeling the political pulse in every State in the Union. With the result of the patient labor before him the editor sums up and announces that Grant is overwhelmingly the choice of the Republicans for President, while Tilden is the deliberate choice of enough Democrats to make his nomination a certainty. This completes the statesman's, for 1869, and everything narrows down to a question of health and longevity.

INFAMOUS PARTISAN ELECTION LAWS.

To give our readers some idea of the tyrannical machinery constructed by the Democrats to carry elections, we need but refer to the testimony taken by the Congressional Investigating Committee in the city of New York. The Sun of that city publishes a portion of the testimony and it shows that Commissioner John J. Davenport directed his clerk Mohler to swear to a batch of 2,950 complaints, charging 2,950 citizens of New York with the crime of registering upon fraudulent naturalization papers. In each case Mohler swore to a personal belief that the crime charged has been committed. On these complaints warrants were issued by Davenport, hundreds of arrests were made in the cases where the parties manifested a disposal to vote the Democratic ticket, and hundreds of citizens were disfranchised, and many of them suffering imprisonment in Davenport's iron cage on the upper story of the Post Office building. Mohler swore to a falsehood when he swore on Sunday and Monday before election day, that he believed the charges made in the 2,950 complaints upon which warrants were issued. He has made no examination of the record in any one case of the 2,950, and the blank complaints had been filled out by the other clerks. He simply swore to a falsehood at the instigation of Commissioner John J. Davenport.

And now when it is proposed to repeal such odious and oppressive laws, laws which conflict with the constitution and defeat the whole purpose of an honest, free and fair election and an equality of all citizens under the government, the whole pack of rabid politicians in Congress cry out "revolution" and demand of Hayes, their tool, that he veto all bills repealing these tyrannical laws at the risk of defeating the means to carry on the government. It has come down to a struggle between freedom and tyranny, let him take the consequences.

AN OLD SCHEME REVIVED.—Bleeding Kansas is to be worked over again. A National Emigration Aid Society has been started by the Republicans in Washington for the purpose of assisting the colored people of the South to go West and freeze out with the grasshoppers. Senator Windom is President, and such men as Hamlin, Chandler, Teller and Garfield are on the Executive Committee. An announcement is made that "in view of the necessity of immediate assistance to persons already immigrating, the Committee will be prepared to announce the names of the persons to whom contributions may be sent." This is highly important. The Treasurer should be known at once. If the Rev. General O. O. Howard is not particularly occupied at this juncture he should be secured to act in the capacity of Treasurer. The skill with which he handled the funds of the Freedman's Savings Bank fits him nobly for this work and his appointment would impart great confidence everywhere.

DEMOCRATIC RULE.—The Washington correspondent of the New York World says: "The intelligent and reasonable way in which the Democratic majority in Congress conducts itself in dealing with public questions surprises the country." This is highly important. The Treasurer should be known at once. If the Rev. General O. O. Howard is not particularly occupied at this juncture he should be secured to act in the capacity of Treasurer. The skill with which he handled the funds of the Freedman's Savings Bank fits him nobly for this work and his appointment would impart great confidence everywhere.

WELL STATED.—A personal friend of the late General Taylor, for all that to his premature death in this way. "The death of Major General Richard Taylor will be regretted by a large number of friends in the North as well as the South. He was the son of Zachary Taylor, President of the United States, and was born in Louisiana. During the war of secession he took an active part, commanding first a Louisiana brigade, and displayed military qualities of a very high order. A dash leader, a cool-headed strategist, a gallant gentleman, faithful in his friendships, whole-souled and devoted to the cause he served, generous, witty—he united all the qualities desirable in a leader, in a friend or a social companion. He had a large influence in the South which he wielded only for good. His death is a public calamity."

A FINISHED LEADER.—The editor who deliberately lies a neighbor is a scoundrel; but when he slanders half of his countrymen, he should be kicked into the Mississippi river. No newspaper in the land exceeds the St. Louis Globe in the work of defaming and vilifying the South, and yet its own columns contain every day testimonials to the decency and good order of that malignant section. This family journal makes a specialty of gathering by telegraph the crimes of the country. Assuming that its enterprise is fairly directed, we must conclude that the South is the most peaceful section of the country, for two-thirds of the murders, arson, rape and seductions reported in the Globe are located in States which never felt the debasing influence of slavery.

A GOOD SERMON.—An exchange states that Rev. James F. Clarke, in a recent sermon, thus hits the nail on the head: "When the principal Southern gentlemen, especially those who took part in the rebellion, tell us voluntarily that they mean to defend the Union, its Constitution and laws, we ought to believe them. If our Republican leaders wish to drive these Southern leaders back into secession and into hostility to the United States government, they take the best way of doing it, by refusing to believe in their sincerity, and rejecting their offers of good-will. The worst enemies of the Union are such Republicans as these. If we should have a new rebellion they would be largely responsible for it."

A WASHINGTON TELEGRAM to the Philadelphia Inquirer says: "The House Education Committee are going to move on Mr. Yocum this week and expect to have him out within a month. The decision is to set him out and examine into the merits afterward."

NOR STATESHIP.—The editor of the Washington Post, says: Mr. Gillette, one of the Greenback Congressmen from Iowa, has the mumps. The disorder isn't dangerous, but candor compels us to state that it isn't state-manlike.

ANDREW TAYLOR, Jr., of Highland Falls, N. Y., died from hydrophobia, aged sixty. He was written by a Spina dog in August last but was not taken sick until last week.

A LIFE INSURANCE CASE.

LEBANON, Pa., April 18.—In the court of equity and law to-day the case of Chas. Drews, Frank Stecher, Israel Brandt, Isiah Hummel, Henry P. Wise and George Zechman, charged with the murder of Joseph Barber, was called. Barber was murdered in December last at Indian town creek about fifteen miles from here, and at that time there was an insurance on his life of $10,000, and it is alleged that the annual premiums were paid by Brandt, Hummel, Weiss and Zechman, and that they incited Drews and Stecher to kill Barber that they might obtain the insurance money. The prisoners were arraigned to-day, and pleaded, not guilty. Col. Gobin, of council for the defendants, moved to quash the indictment upon the ground of irregularity, but Judge Henderson overruled the motion.

A jury was then empaneled and District Attorney Adams opened the case for the prosecution. Joseph Peters, a son-in-law of Charles Drews, one of the prisoners, testified that he saw Drews, Stecher and Barber leave Drews' house on the afternoon of the December murder. They proceeded to the Indian town creek but a few yards away, and then crossed over on a plank Stecher leading; that Stecher turned around, grabbed Barber by the shoulders and threw him into the water with the Stecher in the presence of the Drews family that he had hard work to keep Barber under water. He testified that Drews told him a week before the murder that he (Drews) knew a way to make a pile of money if he (Peter) would keep the secret, and that a murder was the means to be employed. William Sweeney, a life insurance agent, was next called to show that Barber had his life insured in favor of Weiss, Hummel, Brandt and Zechman. Several other witnesses were examined, but their testimony was unimportant.

RADICAL GRATITUDE.—Here is a sample of the gratitude shown by the Republicans to the poor colored heather: Ex Congressman Rainey, of South Carolina (colored), was appointed for the third Auditorship of the Treasury, endorsed by over one hundred Republican members of the House. Instead of his receiving this position, Sherman tendered him a clerkship in the appointment room of his department. Rainey refused to take it, and intimated that it would not be offered to a white ex-Congressman, and it was beneath his dignity to accept it.

Speaker Randall has definitely decided to make it a condition, after the present session of Congress, and his limited staff has no more than to be kept in mind. The Democratic majority in the House is in a full stride for the next Congressional session. The Speaker would be glad that he had better turn his attention to his Philadelphia home, and do something for the Democrats in that city. The Golden State, says off on the Pacific, always has its affairs better managed so far as the interests of the Democratic party are concerned, than it is done in Philadelphia. Charley, if there is any to spare, should always be dealt out at home—until there is a surplus.
