WEDNESDAY MORNING, AUG. 26, 1872.
WORSER THAN THE FEVER.
ANOTHER BATCH OF VILLAINOUS LOUISIANA FRAUDS.

HOW HAYES' FRIENDS MARK IS BURNING THE REVENUE OFFICE IN NEW ORLEANS - THE GOVERNMENT BURNED OUT OF HOUSE AND HOME - GENE DEVENS' MASCALC COURSE.

About a year ago Morris Marks, who figured conspicuously in the steal of the electoral vote of Louisiana, was arrested by Internal Revenue Collector at New Orleans. The protests of all the decent citizens of Louisiana against the appointment prevailed; Marks' services as a collector were terminated, and he was ordered to leave the State.

He returned to New Orleans, and was again appointed collector. He was again arrested, and again ordered to leave the State. He returned again, and was again appointed collector. He was again arrested, and again ordered to leave the State.

IT IS HIGH TIME.

"It is high time," remarks one of Mr. Hayes' most serious organs, "that the political managers were given to understand that an election is not a mere contest of a fraud." The brief utterance embodies a whole volume of the same sentiment, casting hypocrisy that has been the most prominent characteristic of Mr. Hayes and his political associates since the latter was elected in 1868.

"But Webster has made statements about that ring ever since his return here. Has he made them to you. Asked the lawyer.

"I decline to tell you anything about the case," said Isaac. "You are not a Revenue officer."

"But I'm an American citizen," retorted the lawyer with determination, "and I am entitled to information which concerns a matter of great fraud. You refuse to give it to me, but I give you notice now, I'll get it."

"How are you to get it?" asked Isaac.

"I shall go to a Senate committee and request them to demand this information of you. I've got the influence to do this, and you know it."

Mr. Baum called on the high horse at this announcement, and said to the lawyer, leaving a sigh at the same time, "Well, what do you want to know?"

The attorney said he wanted to know the facts as given above; that he had not submitted any written report, and he had given in detail the evidence he had procured in the case. He had frequently ascertained that Kellogg's influence was great.

The Webster report, together with the contents of the ring, and the names of the members, were given to the public by the attorney. It was a critical time for Kellogg, and he had not been able to get any more information out of the ring.

Some months ago Mr. Flores, a leading tobacco merchant in New Orleans, had been arrested by the Internal Revenue Bureau at Washington in detail the thieving operations of Marks and his gang. This affidavit surrounded himself with congenial spirits, all of whom had taken a hand in the crime of stealing Hayes into the Presidency, and at once began to provide for an era of good feeling.

The revenue of the Government was being paid to the Internal Revenue Collector at New Orleans made no fuss about it, because they had expected nothing else. Marks' operations were finally came into collision with the business interests of a citizen, and he did make a fuss.

ALWAYS TRUE.

An exchange remarks: "The Democratic party always has been, and always must be, the party of 'honest money.'" The Democratic party has never advocated the payment of public or private debts at a less rate than a hundred cents on the dollar. For the hundred cents on the dollar, the Democratic party has compelled the payment of $1.30 to $1.50 on every $1.00 of debt, and has claimed to be the only 'honest money party' while thus robbing the people for the enrichment of a few. Now that the plot has been worked out, and the wrong is beyond remedy, it is high time for the authors of the robbery to stop boasting of their honesty. The Democracy of today stands where the Democracy of the Jackson era stood, in favor of no paper that is not worth its face in lawful money; in favor of a sound currency of gold and silver, or its equivalent; in favor of treating all classes of public creditors alike; in favor of the same dollar for the laborer as for the millionaire. It accepts the wrong of the past because it is unremediable, and proposes to do all that is 'honest in the bond.' And it sets its face against this needless agitation of settled questions, whether of finance or other issues growing out of the war. The great issue of the hour is whether the majority of the voters will shirk the majority of that which is 'honest in the bond.' And it sets its face against this needless agitation of settled questions, whether of finance or other issues growing out of the war.
