THE REPUBLICAN.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, AUG. 27, 1874. THE GOSAMER THREAD ISSUE.

No sane man questions that the States possess all the rights not delegated to the Federal Government—Washington Post.

This proposition is all right enough when it comes to the States, but when it comes to the Federal Government, it is a different matter. It is a question of the rights of the States, and it is a question of the rights of the people.

What do you think the real issue is? It is the right of the States to govern themselves, and it is the right of the people to elect their own representatives.

It is a question of the rights of the States, and it is a question of the rights of the people. It is a question of the rights of the States to govern themselves, and it is a question of the rights of the people to elect their own representatives.

It is a question of the rights of the States, and it is a question of the rights of the people. It is a question of the rights of the States to govern themselves, and it is a question of the rights of the people to elect their own representatives.

It is a question of the rights of the States, and it is a question of the rights of the people. It is a question of the rights of the States to govern themselves, and it is a question of the rights of the people to elect their own representatives.

It is a question of the rights of the States, and it is a question of the rights of the people. It is a question of the rights of the States to govern themselves, and it is a question of the rights of the people to elect their own representatives.

HON. WILLIAM A. WALLACE ON THE POLITICAL ISSUE OF THE DAY.

(Interview in New York Herald.) Senator Wallace of Pennsylvania, sat in his rooms in the Gilsey house August 27th, when a representative of the Herald called upon him.

The atmosphere had not been taken away by the arrival of the Herald, but by the presence of a man of letters and hard at work. He looked up at the visitor entered, which he had been reading and waiting into a conversation of which the following contains the essence:

"Ohio? I can't say I know much about the condition of affairs in Ohio, but I think the election there will depend very much on what takes place in Maine."

"Both sides are active I suppose?" "Usually so, but I think the election there will depend very much on what takes place in Maine."

It is a question of the rights of the States, and it is a question of the rights of the people. It is a question of the rights of the States to govern themselves, and it is a question of the rights of the people to elect their own representatives.

POLITICS IN CALIFORNIA.

(Perry's Frigate.) The break-up of parties in California has brought to the front several important party leaders, most of whom are believed by the general public to have shuffled off this mortal coil.

Among these are William M. Gwin, David S. Terry and Volney E. Howard. Gwin will be seventy-four on the 9th of October, and has been a conspicuous figure in public affairs since he was a boy.

He was born in Kentucky, United States Marshal and Representative in Congress from Mississippi, Commissioner of Public Building in New Orleans, Senator in Congress from California, an active Confederate during the rebellion, a political prisoner in one of the forts, at the end of the war utterly bankrupt, now a rich and wonderfully preserved old man.

Terry has a sadder history. Born in the South, he was one of the characters that went to the Pacific coast after the acquisition of California, was Chief Justice of that State, and killed David C. Boderick in a duel, September 24th, 1850. Volney E. Howard must be quite an old man as Gwin. Born in Norridgewock Maine, where he studied law, he emigrated to Mississippi, became a distinguished Democratic editor, fought two duels, one with Sargent S. Prentiss, the great Whig orator, and the other with the renowned Governor McNutt, of reputation notoriety.

His next step was to migrate to Texas, and he was by that State returned as a representative in Congress from 1849 to 1853. From Texas he removed to California, and became, like Gwin and Terry, an active Confederate, and like them, was compelled to retire from public life, but found a livelihood as a member of the San Francisco bar.

Now this somewhat notorious trinity, forgiven by a generous Government, is actively engaged in politics, and will, in all probability, again figure on the stage public affairs before they are called to appear before the Supreme Judge himself. Such is the romance of American history, paralleled only by such lives as Thiers, Guibault, Giscard, Gardin and Diere in the Old World, yet as nothing where the poor man of the day may become the rich man of tomorrow, and where even the millionaire has been known to revert to the privation of the very mines from which he sprang.
