STAR ROUTE CONTRACTS.

also the routes which cannot be reached by either railroads or steamboats, but on which the mails must be carcined by horses and men. They are the stage and horse-back routes, and though few and animportant in the East and South, where railroad and water facilities are abundant, are numerous and expensive in the West and Southwest. The majority of these Western and Southwestern Star routes were advertised to be let in November, 1877, the contracts to begin in July, 1878, and to run for four years. Who were the contractors for these routes? We could not name all of the gentlemen whose names will probably soon become famous, or rather infamous, in American history, but a few may be mentioned. It was very seldom that a man entered into this business alone.
