The Official Paper of Congress.

I PUBLISH now my annual Prospectus of The Daily to remind subscribes, and inform those who may desire to subscribe, that Congress will meet on the lat Monday of next December, when I shall recommence publishing the above-named papers. They have been published so long that most public men know their character, and therefore I deem it needless, to give a minute account of the kind of matter they will contain.

The Daily Globs will contain a report of the Debates in both branches of Congress, as taken down by reporters equal, at least, to any corps of short-hand writers in this or in any other country. A majority of them will each be able to report, exchaint, ten thousand words an hour, while the average number of words spoken by fluent speakers rarely exceeds seven thousand five hundred words allour. When the debates of a day do not make more than forty columns, they shall appear in the Daily Globe the next morning, which will, contain, also, the news of the day, together with such editorial articles as may be suggested by passing events.

It is also my intention, from time to time, as occasion may require, to publish my reminscences of the public men with whom I have been associated during the last twenty-eight years. Anecdotes of General Jackson, and the leaders of the party which he conducted, and the leading men of other parties, will, I believe, be interesting one, other parties, will, I believe, be interesting one, the proper to say that the Globe would hever be a partizan paper. This pledge will not be forfeited by introducing as a contribution to history the political traits of character which distinguished the public men of my time. Although I am, and intend to remain a thorough Democrat, I will never intrude my principles in a way to inake the Globe and honest memory and with that view I persons and events which go to make up history, I hope to make the Globe and honest memory and with that view I persons and events which go to make up history, I hope to make the Globe a And my friend Bob Styles, held up before my complex questions must be discussed in it; for example, the currency, Kansas, revenue, and other questions. This scheme was not actually so absurd as it appeared at first sight. Maggie Lee was a tall, queenly woman, with an almost masculine air, and at that time, I had a very slight ferm-almost effeminate, so that, in fact, there was really but little difference in that point. Then I had light hair. telerably long and a fresh complexion. Part my hair in the middle, and put a bonnet on my head and few persons would have suspected but I was really one of the softer sex. These accessories also gave me quite a decided resemblance to Maggie Lee, especially when, as in this case, the disguise was her own. Then the day chosen for the runaway match was an auspicious one. Margie's father was to drive her to D____, a small village near where she lived, and there she was to join a sailing party down D- river to the grove three miles below, from which the party was to return in the evening in carriages.

the village, and should go on the boat with the sailing party, while Meggie after leaving her fathor, should ship with Bob Styles, across the coun-

At last, I got dressed, and presented myself befeeling very much pinched about the waist, and with an uncomfortable consciousness that mymy-shirt sleeves were too short, or wanting altogether.

Everything finished, in the way of toilet-Bob Styles took me into his light wagon-drove me over to D-, by a secluded route, and left me at the hotel, where the sailing party was to assemble. Several of the pick-nickers were already there, and they greeted my cavalier cordially (everybody knew Bob Styles,) asking if he was going with them, etc. He told them he was not.

"Pressing business engagements, you know, and all that sort of thing. Deuced sorry, I can't go through. I had just time to bring Miss Lee over, and now I'm off. Mr. Bimby this is Miss Lee. Miss Withergall, Miss Lee," and he rattled off a long string of brief introductions, which convinced me that but few of the company were acquainted with the young lady whom I was personating-a very fortunate thing for the preservation of my disguise.

Mr. Bimby, a tall, legal-looking man, with a hook nose, and eye-glass and fluffy hair-seemed to be prepossessed with my personelle, and I overheard him whisper to Bob Styles, as he went out: "Nice looking girl, that Miss Lee."

"Yes," answered Bob, with a mischievous glance at me, "she is a nice girl, though a little go-ahead sometimes. Keep a little look out on her, will you-then, lowering his voice-"not a bad match for you, old fellow; she is rich."

"Is she?" said Mr. Bimby, his interest deep-

"On my honor," replied Bob. "Forty thousand dollars in her own right. Good day!" and he and then the electron the patient again.

was gone. Maggie Lee, artful creature that she was-had told her father that the sailing party was to assemble at another hotel, and thither he had taken her. Having business in D-, he left her there, merely saying that he would send the carriage for her at 11 o'clock. She, like a dutiful daughter, kissed him, bid him good bye, and before he had gone a hundred rods, took a seat in Bob Styles' light wagon which had driven up to the back door as old Lee's carriage drove away from the front, and the old story of head strong love and prejudiced age was enacted over again.

As for us, of the pic nic excursion, we had a delightful sail down to the grove, but somehow, I could not enjoy it as much as I ought to have done. When I walked on board the boat I felt awkward, as if everybody was looking at me. I found Mr. Bimby, as I had suspected, a young and rising lawyer, mighty in Blackstone in his own opinion. He insisted on paying for my ticket (the boat was a regular excursion packet,) and purchasing enough oranges, pears and candies, to set up a street stand. Four or five times I was on the point of swearing at his impudent officiousness, but bit my tongue just in time to prevent the exposure. But it was not with him that I found my role the hardest to play. "No: the young ladies were the difficult ones to deceive. For instance, there was one among them a beautiful girl of seventeen, just returned from boarding school, who had not seen Maggie Lee for three years. Of course, she was delighted to see me, when she found out that I was Maggie, which by the way, did not occur until after we had started. She threw herself into my arms, pulled my veil aside and kissed me half a dozen times, in manner that made my finger ends tingle for an hour. It was all very nice, but if I had been in propria persona, I would have liked it better,-

As it was, I felt as if I were "obtaining goods under false pretenses," and that lawyer Bimby might issue a warrant for my arrest on that ground, at any moment.

A whole knot of crinoline then surrounded me, on the upper deck of the boat to the utter exclusion and consequent disgust of Mr. Bimby, and the other gentlemen. I kept very quiet, only the others-Lord bless you! how they gabbled! Under a strict promise of secrecy, the little boarding school maiden, who had kissed me so affectionately, revealed all her love affairs, and also became unpleasantly confidential about other matters-innocent enough in themselves, but not customarily talked of between ladies and gentle-

I was terribly embarrassed, but it would not do to give up then. As soon as my trick should become known, Bob Styles' trick would also come out; and as news of that kind travels fast in the country, he and his lady love would be telegraph. ed and followed before they could reach Philadelphia, where the Styles' family lived, and where the knot was to be tied.

The river breeze was very fresh where we sat, and I noticed that several of the ladies were glancing uneasily at me. I couldn't divine the reason, until Jennie, my little friend from boarding school, laid her face dangerously close to mine, and whispered:

"My dear Maggie, your dress is blowing up terribly high; your ancles will be town talk with all the conflower !"

Nor was I unconscious of having a very small foot for a man, and had donned a pair of open worked stockings which came nearly up to my wa ist, with a pair of garters borrowed from a servant girl, in all of which toggery my "running gear' looked quite feminine and respectable; but the idea of the gentleman talking about my ankles and of being cautioned thus by a young girl, who would have been frightened to death if I had told her the same thing yesterday, was too much for me. I burst in a sort of strangulated laugh, which I could only check by swallowing half of my little filagree lace-edged handkerchief. The young ladies all looked at me in apparent astonishment at such a voice, and I wanted to laugh all the more. Fortunately, Mr. Bimby came to my rescue at the moment, and edged himself in among the crinoline.

"May I sit here?" he asked, pointing to a low stood near me.

"Certainly," I simpered, in my high falsetto. "Ah, thank you," said Bimby-with a lackalaisical air, which nauscated me, as coming from one man to another—"you are as kind as you are fascinating !"

"You flatter me !" "I? No, indeed; praise of you cannot be flatery, Miss Lee."

"Oh, sir, really, you are a very naughty man," I said, in the most feminine tone. I could com He cast a languishing glance at me though the black lace veil, and I fairly began to fear his "feeling."

We soon arrived at the grove and found our band-engaged before hand-awaiting us. Of course, dancing was the first amusement, and lawyer Bimby led me for a schottishe. It was hard at first for me to take the lady's part in my dance but I soon got accustomed to it. When a waltz was proposed. I resolved to have a little amusement at the expense of the unfortunate Bimby. I had first made him purposely jealous, by dancknew, in my character, but who never enemeeted ing with two other young fellows, one whom I me as Maggie Lee. This young man, who was a great woman killer-a sort of easy, devil may care rascal, who made the ladies run after him, by his alternate wrath of action and coolness of protestation-I selected to play off against my legal admirer. I allowed him to hold me very closely fore Maggie Lee, blushing a great deal, I believe, and occasionally looked at him with a half fascinating expression. When we stopped dancing, he led me to my seat, keeping his arm about my waist, and I permitted it.

Having thus stirred Bimby to a feast of wrathful valor, I asked one of the gentleman to direct the musicians to play a waltz. Bimby came immediately.

"Ahem-a Miss Lee,-shall I-a have the honor of—a trying to waltz with you?" I smiled a graceful acquiescence and we com enced. Now I am an old stranger at waltzing. I can keep it up longer than any non-professional dancer, male or female, whom I ever met. As long as the Cachnea or Schounbriunnen ring in my ears,

I can go on if it is for a vear Not so Bimby. He plead want of practice, and acknowledged that he soon got dizzy.

"Aha, old boy," though I, "I'll give you a turn, But I only smiled, and said that I should prob ably get tired first. "Ah yes!" he exclaimed, "of course, I can waltz as long as any one lady, but not much more." For the three first minutes, my cavalier did well He went smoothly and evenly, but at the expiration of that time began to grow warm. Five minntes elapsed, and Bimby's breath became harder and harder. On we went, however, and I scorned to notice his slackening up at every round, when we passed my scat .- After some ten or twelve minutes, the wretched man grasped out between h is steps. "Ah, a-are you not-get-getting tired?" "Oh no!" I burst forth, as cooly as if we were riding round the room-"oh, no, I feel as if I ould waltz all night." The look of despair that he gave was terrible

I was bound to see him through, however, and we kept at it. Bimby staggered, and made wild stops in all directions-His shirt collar wilted, his e yes protruded, his jaw hung down; and, altogether, I saw he could not hold out much lenger." "This is delightful," I said composedly,-"and ou, Mr. Bimby, waltz so casily." "Puff-ah puff-yes-oh-puff-very puff-de lightful," gasped he. "Don't you think it ought to go a little fast-

He rolled his eyes heavenward in agonv. "Ah, puff-I don't-ah, puff-don't know." So, when we neared the musicians, I said, "Faster, if you please-faster!" and they played a le wirlwind. . Poor Bimby threw his feet about like a fast pacer, and revolved after the manner of a tectotum which was nearly run down. At last he staggered a step buckwards, and spinning eccentrically away from me, pitched headlong into the midst of a small bevy of ladies in a corner. I turned around cooly, and walking to my seat, sent the young woman for a glass of ice water.

The miserable lawyer recovered his senses just in time to see me thank his rival for the water. I got some idea from this, of the fun the young ladies find in tormenting us poor devils of the other sex.

At this juncture, and before Mr. Bimby had time to apologize for his accident, little Jennie came running into the pavilion which served as a ball room. As she came near, I perceived that her hands were clutched tightly in her dress and I positively shuddered, as she whispered to me: "Maggie! come and help me fix my skirtsthey are all coming down!"

What should I do? I was in agony. A cold perspiration broke out upon my forchead, I wished myself a thousand miles away, and anathematized Bob Styles' masquerading project inwardly with fearful maledictions. I said I was tired out-could not somebody else

No, nothing would do, but I must accompany speaking monosyllables, in a falsette voice; but her to the house of a gentleman who owned the grove and assist her to arrange her clothing.

I felt as if an apopletic fit would be a fortunate occurence for me just then.

However, I nerved myself up to the task-and accompanied Jennie to the house designated .-An old lady showed us into her chamber, and Jonnie, heaving a sigh of relief, let go her dress. As she did so-pardon my blushes-a petticont fell to the floor. She was about to proceed, but I alarmed her by a sudden and vehement gesture

"Stop!" I cried frantically, forgetting my falsetto; "stop! don't undress for God's sake." She opened her great brown eye to their widest extent. "And why not?"

"Because I am-I am-a-can you keep a secret ?" "Why yes-how frightened you look! Why what is the matter, Maggie? you-why-oh! oh!! oh!!! And she gave three fearful screams. "Hush, no noise, or I am lost !" I exclaimed putting my hand over her mouth. "I swear I mean no harm. If I had I would not have stopped you. Don't you see?" "She was all of a tremble, poor little thing; but she saw the force of my argument. "Oh, sir," she said, "I see you are a man; but what does it all mean? Why do you dress so?" I told her the story as briefly as possible—and exacted from her a promise of most sacred secre-I then went outside the door, and waiting till she had arranged her dress, when she called me in again. She had heard of me from Maggie and wanted to hear the particulars; so I sat down by her and we had a long talk, which ended in mutual feeling of friendliness and old acquaintanceship, quite wonderful for people meeting for the first time. Just as we started to go back to the pavilion, I said that I must relieve my mind of one more burden. "And what is that?" she asked.

"Thoso kisses. You thought I was Maggie Lee, or you would not have given me them. They were very sweet, but I suppose I must give them back. And I did. She blushed a good deal, but she didn't resist only when I got through, she glanced up timidly, and said:

"I think you are real naughty, anyhow." When we returned, I found lawyer Bimby quite recovered from his dizziness, and all hand for supper, which was served in the ball room. I sat between Bimby and Jennie, and made love to both of them in turn; to one as Maggie Lee, and to the other as myself. After supper, at which I astonished several by eating rather more heartily than young ladies generally do, we had more dancing, and I hinted pretty strongly to Mr. Bimby that I should like to try another waltz. He didn't take the hint. Finding it rather dry amusement to dance with my own kind, I soon abandoned that pleasure, and persuaded Jennie to stroll off into the moonlight with me. We found the grove a charming place, full of picturesque little corners, and rustic seats, and great gray rocks leaning out over the river. On one of these latter, a little bench

Here we sat down, in the full flood of the moonlight, and having just had dinner, I felt wonderfully in need of a cigar. Accordingly, I went back to a little stand near the ball room, and purchased several of the wonderful woman who sold refreshments. Then returning to the seat by the rocks, I gave up all cares or fears for my incognito, and revelled in the pleasure of my solitude the fragrance of my eigar—the moonlight—and little Jennie's presence. How long we sat there, heaven alone knows. We talked, and laughed, and sang, and looked in each other's eyes, and told fortunes, and performed all the nonsenical operations common amongst young people just falling in love with each other, and might have remained there until the month of August, in this year of our Lord Eighteen Hundred and Fifty seven, for aught I know, had not the carriages been sent to convey us home, and thorest of the company began to wonder where This wonder begat questions, the questions fears, and the fears a search, headed by the valiant Bimby. They called and looked and listened, but our position down in the sheltered nook among the rocks, prevented them from hearing us or we them. At length they hit upon our path and all came along, single file, until they got to the open space

Then they saw a sight. I was spread out in a free and easy position, my bonnet taken off, and my hair somewhat, towzled up. One foot rested on the ground, and the other on a rock about level with my head (regardless of ankles this time) and there I sat, puffing away in a very unladylike style, at a high flavor ed Concha.

arm almost on my shoulder, and her small waist almost encircled by my arm. Just as the party came along above us, I laughed out in a loud masculine voice.

"Just think of poor what's his-name there-Bimby! Suppose he knew that he has been making love to a man?"

JEWS IN HINDOSTAN.

The Jews in England have sent an address to their brethren in the Bombay army, exhorting them to remain true to the interests of the British Crown. Apropos of this, the Abendzeitung of yesterday evening publishes the following extract from Hassel's Geography: "In Malabar alone there are thousands of Jews, and in the remainder of the peninsula their number is proportionably great. They date their presence in Hindostan from the period of the Babylonian Captivity .-They asserts that a portion of the tribe of Manasses, after three year's wandering, finally settled in India, to the number of twenty thousand fumiles. Growing in favor among the Hindoos, they in a short time increased to eighty thousand familics, and were soon powerful enough to establish the kingdom of Cranganore, upon the coast of Malabar. Here they flourished for some years inder a republican form of government, presided over by two chiefs. They still retain their chronicles in the Hebrew language, which are said to commence with the reign of Nebuchadnezzar. This people are known as the 'white Jews.' There are also 'black Jews' in India, supposed to have descended from slaves of the former, who were converted by their masters to the Mosaic faith."

DICKINSON AND JACKSON.

Gen. Jackson settled in Nashville between the Jennie was sitting close beside me with her years 1795 and 1800, and began the practice of law. Dickinson was already there following the same profession. He was a great duelist, having killed several in duels, and almost certain to kill at the first fire. His mode of firing was very uncertain. Instead of raising his pistol from his side and fire at the word, he would bring it down from above until he got to the proper level, and then fire. All the merchants in Nashville had Dickinson retained in their behalf, and he being the only lawyer there until Gen. Jackson came, no redress could be obtained by the opposite side Gen. Jackson refused to be retained by these merchants to the exclusion of all other parties. The consequence was that he issued fifty writs to the first term of the Court at Nashville.

He issued writs against the merchants, who until then had gone scott free. This irritated them, Lawyer Bimby was in a rage. He vowed to and they being desirous of getting Gen. Jackson kill me, and even squared off, but the rest of the out of the way, incited Dickinson to provoke a duel. He began by acting on the trials offensively to the General

Though Poverty, frewning, peeps in at my door, I'll neither be beaten nor vainly deplore; And look in his face with the heart of a man; And, hiving at home all the joys that I may, Forget my poor friend who lives over the way.

A correspondent of the New York Tribune re ates the following ancedote, illustrative of the character of Gen. Harney, who has command of the troops destined for Utal:

In general appearance, Gen. Harney is impressive. He is considerably over six feet tall, and is large-bound and muscular. His hair was red, but is now thickly mixed with white. He wears it short and begins to be bald on the crown of his head. His monstaches and beard are nearly white and are also thick and clipped short. His cycs are blue, and dull, for he uses spectacles. In younger years, he must have been a model of physical vigor and strength, but he now looks older than he really is, for his age, I believe, does not exceed fifty-five.

While in St. Louis, I heard an ancedote illustrative of his character, which I have never seen in print. It matters not from what cause the disease originated, however long standing or obstinate the case, necovery is certain, and in a shorter time than a permanent cure can be effected by any other-treatment, even after the disease has baffled the skill of eminent physicians and resisted all their means of cure. The medicines are pleasant without odor, causing no sickness and free from mercury or balsam. During twenty years of practice, I have rescaed from the Jaws of Death many thousands, who, in the last stages of the above-mentioned diseases, had been given up to die by their physicians, which warrants me in promising to the afflicted, who may place themselves under my care, a perfect and most apeedy cure. Secret Diseases are the greatest enemies to health, as they are the first cause of Consumption, Scrofula and many other diseases, and should be a terror to the human family. As a permanent cure is scarcely ever effected, a majority of the cases falling into the hands of incompetent persons, who not only fail to cure the diseases but ruin the constitution, filling the system with mercury, which, with the disease, hastens the sufferer into a rapid Consumption.

But should the disease and the treatment not cause the suffering down to the uniformative of the public provises and consigning them to an early grave.

ous practices my patients can be restored to robust, yigorous health.

The afflicted are cautioned against the use of Patent Medicines, for there are so many ingenious snares in the columns of the public prints to catch and rob the unwary sufferers, that millions have their constitutions ruined by the vile compounds of quack sloctors, or the equally poisonous nostrums rended as "Patent Medicines," I have carefully analyzed many of the so-called Patent Medicines, and find that nearly all of them contain Corrosive Sublimate, which is one of the strongest preparations of mercury and a deadly poison, which, instead of curing the disease, disables the system for life.

Three-fourths of the patent nostrums now in use are put up by unprincipled and ignorant persons who do not understand even the alphabet of the Matrial Medica, and are equally as destitute of any knowledge of the human system, having one object only in view, and that to make money regardless of consequences.
