WHYTUSCALOOSAALWAYS VOTED AGAINST JACKSON.

Old Hickory crossed the Warrior river at the close of a campaign, at Carthage in Tuscaloosa county. There he halted and rested for the recruit and refreshment of the sick and wounded for a few days. The citizens of Tuscaloosa, then a small village, gotup a public dinner to the Gener. al. A deputation of militia officers, armed cap-apie, went to Carthage to extend the invitation to Jackson. They found him busy, on foot, near the main road; dismounted, and with well set phrase their spokesman invited him to the dinner.

"For how many have you made provision? asked Jackson. "For all my mon?" "No only for yourself and officers."

"Then," replied the old hero, "I, nor officer of mine will eat a dinner not provided for all my boys!" Then turning on his heclabruptly, he left

The poor militiamen were sadly discomfitted and mortified at the rebuff. But worse was in store for them. A quarter-master, or his assistant, had laid his hands on every horse of the delegation and claimed them for public zervice. Furious, they appealed to the General. He declined interfering; other men's horses were taken, why not theirs-was surprised at their want of patriotism not willing to give up their horses for the transportation of the sick and wounded soldiers! The case was hopeless—the weather warm—the military trapping coat, sword, boots, etc., and unsuited for a long march in the hot and dusty weather .-No conveyance, however, could be seen. The generals, colonels, majors of the Tuscaloosa mi litia, walked to Tuscaloosa.

"And that's the reason," navely added my informant, "why Tuscaloosa always voted against the old General .- Mobile Mercury.
