PHILAD'A., Aug. 18, 1858. Mr. Ellitor :- We again bring you "glad tidings of good news;" the "Union" is reviving. In Boston, New York, Baltimore, Cincinnati, from Maine Southwards, the same tidings greet that President Comonfort's administration was so us, "that God's presence is enriching the hearts of His Children." You will remember 300,000 of our population never enter a church. Now it accommodates our German element-again in its mission it brings the gospel to for the spoils." I thought this latter part of his our highways, into our courts and confined districts; and this peculiar feature indicative of a Mexicans, though I doubt if any other people, do not generally choose foreigners on whom to free and full salvation to all—has brought in the "vilest of the vile," now ornaments of Christian graces, seldom excelled !

We have already heard of infidelity succumb ing to the truth; and the quiet peaceful character of our population, compared with what it has been, is the fruit of this sacrifice of labor and love. Thirty-five persons previous to its removal to its present position-Broad and Girard Avenueprofessed to have found peace, and now are rejoicing in the hope of glory. A poor teamster ofa letter read at one of the noon-day meetings from a Lehigh county farmer whom curiosity led there raptures of his new joys, and that quietness dwelwhen the fruits of the present work shall be unfolded.

The Young Men's Christian Association of this one by one returns, "that the success accompanying their labors has far exceeded expectations." The very absence of sectarianism, at once made the movement popular and efficacious. In the mountains of our State, Blair county for instance, almost a wilderness and wild in forests, where no Christian Church had been organized, the Union Hymn book is the delight of the settlers, and said one of these returned laborers-"My heart was delighted as I heard them sing our familiar tunes and circulate them wherever they went. In one locality, Pleasant Valley, so great was their want of the bread and water of life that they sent word to the association to send ministerial aid." They longed to see and know more of the meck and lowly Jesus. Such my Christian friends, is the see of the "Union," and is it not our duty to lend our influence to further it? In our prairies of the far West, said Dr. Nevins, of Chelsca, Mass, having had occasion to tarry over night at one of the cabins, I found the same blessed influence of the Spirit now present with us, and it was to my soul's satisfaction that I attended the same evening a Union prayer meeting with my guest where I discovered a gracions revival.—Said he, "I felt my heart warm within me, for God was there." We have only to follow God's guidance and He will lead us into paths of peace and pleasantness. Sometimes under a seeming discouragement are stores of blessings! Man's rights should always be secondary to God's. The germ exists there which we are sure will eventually bud into a profusion of rich fruits to the honor and glory of God. These seeming victories of Satan are the sure harbinger of his final defeat. The aggressive history of Christianity from its commencement has sufficiently demonstrated this position. And should we not humble ourselves and seek for who is like unto him! In him is fullness of love. His promises are yea and amen, and however discouraging the circumstances, He will lead us

[CONCLUSION.]

The steamer that left Vera Cruz on the 7th of February, 1858, had a larger passenger freight, (if I may be allowed the term,) than usual, for she carried in addition to the ordinary travelers between the two countries, the Comonfort fugitives. Some of them had rather a tight race of t, before they could get out of the reach of the victorious party. When we came from New Orleans the beginning of the year, the officers of the boat remarked that they seldom had as large a party on board as ours was except at the close of a revolution, for the ordinary passenger business is not large; at that time it was not supposed near its close, but who can tell what a week may come again.' As for real patriotism," said my informant, "never look for that, they only go in except the French, perhaps, would have taken the whole matter so quietly.

A strong "norther" had been blowing for two days previously, and in fact had not quite gone down even yet, and as we were stenining head to sea, the motion was considerable; in ten minutes from the time of leaving the anchorage two of bard matter to root them out now. the ladies were sick, and in half an hour there was hardly a passenger left on deck; I believe fated Cairo, in a fine steamer, called the Diana. there were but two or three of the whole lot, who She was a large, we'll ordered and comfirtable fers as his humble thank-offering to remove the did not succamb to that most prostrating of all boat, but not fast. six men against one are great odds even though the one had a pistol, and as the event proved he either could not, or would not use it. "Why," replied he, "the thing hap, ened so suddenly that we had no time to concert any plan of action, and I think they all felt pretty much as I did, that my life was worth more than the freebooters, and t would be foolish to risk it in a contest with him; still I feel ashamed to have been one of six that were all robbed by one man," and he did look a little sheepish about it. Yet there is truth in what he said; people often don't know what to do on an emergency, who would act resolutely enough if they had time to consider, or had some one to lead them. They were also on board some Germans from San Francisco who were lightened of their wordly goods and especially anything in the shape of coin, by a band of robbers beyond Mexico. The robbers were more numerous than the robbed, and well armed too, so they could do nothing. The poor fellows were almost reduced to a state of nudity. While on this subject I may mention that I met in Mexico a Pennsylvanian, a strapping six footer from Cumberland who had been many years in the country. He said he had had occasion twice only to resert to fire arms, neither time was it necessary to take life. One time as he was riding along the main road (he looked after the telegraph,) in pursuance of his business he was hailed by two armed men, and told to "lie down with his face in the mud," the usual formula by which the robbers addressed their intended victims. Instead of lying down with his face in the mud, he jerked out his six shooter, and prepared for action. "Oh pass on, don't fire, we don't want to stop you," was the next exclamation from these prudent gentlemen of the bush. The other occasion was in the city of Mexico, when he was stopped in the dark by some men who seized hold of him, he fired a shot in the air, and they speedily dropped him previously, and who knows but my turn may and fled! A Frenchman there also acted with great courage when stopped on the road; he killed three of his assailants, but was either killed or badly wounded himself. There is no doubt of conversation might apply to others as well as the fact; robberies are very frequent, but they exercise their plundering abilities, when mounted, or out of the stage. They seem, however, to consider this latter fair game and attack, no matter who are in it. The country from its vast wild mountains, deep ravines and weak government offers peculiar facilities to banditti; itwould be
