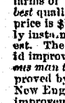
Hammonton Lands.



NEW ENGLAND SETTLEMENT—RARE OPPORTUNITY —TO ALL WANTING FARMS, in a healthy place. Twenty-five miles from Philadelphia, on the Camden and Atlantic railroad,

New Jersey. An old estate has recently been opened for sale, and the first division of 10,000 acres divided up into farms of twenty acres and upwards. The soil is of the best quality for the production of fruits, grains, &c. The price is $15 to $20 per acre, payable in easy quarter yearly instalments, within a term of four years, with interest. The terms are made easy in order to insure the rapid improvement of the land, by enabling every industrious man to buy a farm. It is now being extensively improved by good roads, and some of the best citizens from New England and the Middle States are erecting large improvements. It is a scene of the greatest improvement out of Philadelphia. Seventy-five houses have been built in four months. Practical farmers and business-men from the length and breadth of the Union are settling there. It is an important business place, on account of its being in the midst of a great market. Every article raised upon this land finds an immediate sale. The water is excellent, and no such thing as fever is known.

The soil is a sandy or clay loam, with a clay bottom and retentive of manures. It is free of stones and easily worked. It abounds largely in the phosphates, and such is its fertility that from the crops produced both upon this land and the large area adjoining under cultivation, it will be found not to be excelled anywhere in the production of crops most adapted to its market.

The reader may be well aware that the earliest and the best fruits and vegetables come from New Jersey, which are annually exported to the amount of millions of dollars. The land is [illegible] besides being accessible in every way for manufacturers, has an abundant supply of the best quality of muck manure.

Lumber and building materials can be had on the spot at a cheap price, from the mills. Other mills are now being opened, and brickyards being started on the ground. A person can put up a frame tenement for present convenience for one hundred dollars. On account of the extensive emigration, this is the best course to pursue in order to get a place to live in at first. Carpenters and builders are on hand to put up houses on the best terms

In settling here the emigrant has many advantages.—He is within a few hours' ride of the great cities in the Middle States & New England: he is near his old friends and associations; he is in a settled country, where every improvement and comfort of civilization is at hand; he is in a healthy place, and is not subject to the certainty of losing the greater part of his family and his own health by the so malignant fevers which make the graves of so many millions of the young and hardy in far off regions away from home and friends. Besides, he has a mild climate and an open winter.

There are three trains daily to Philadelphia, and to all those who improve, the railroad company gives a free ticket.

The reader will at once be struck with the advantages here presented, and ask himself why the property has not been taken up before. The reason is, it was never thrown in the market; and unless these statements were correct, no one would be invited to examine the land before purchasing. This all are expected to do. They will see the land under cultivation; they will meet persons, no doubt, from their own neighborhood: they will witness the improvements, and can judge of the character of the population. Persons should come prepared to purchase, as many are locating, and locations are not held on refusal.

The Hammonton Farmer, a monthly literary and agricultural sheet, containing full information of Hammonton, will be sent to each inquirer, and can be obtained at 25 cts. per annum.

Title indisputable. Warrantee deeds given, clear of all incumbrance, when purchase money is paid. Route to the land—Leave Vine street wharf, Philad'a, for Hammonton by railroad, at 7½ a. m., and 5½ p. m.; when there inquire for Mr. Byrnes. Boarding conveniences will be found. Letters and applications can be addressed to S. B. COUGHLIN, 202 south Fifth street below Walnut, Philad'a. Maps and information cheerfully furnished.

JAMES F. MAXWELL,

MANUFACTURER OF

Improved Fire and Water Proof

COMPOSITION ROOFING,

HARRISBURG, PA.,

RESPECTFULLY inform the citizens of Harrisburg, Reading, Lancaster, Lebanon, and their vicinities, that we are prepared to put on roofs on most liberal terms, and at the shortest notice.

We respectfully call the attention of persons about to build, to our invaluable method of roofing, now much used throughout the principal cities of the United States and their vicinities. This mode of roofing having all the combined requisites of cheapness, Durability, and Security against Fire and Water, and dispensing with high gable walls; the roofs require an inclination of not more than three-quarters (¾) of an inch to the foot, and in many cases saving the entire cost of rafters—the ceiling joist being used.

The gutters are made of the same material, without any extra charges; consequently, our roofs are put up at almost half the cost of either Tin, Slate, or Shingles. The material being of an imperishable nature, it surpasses all others in Durability: besides, in case of any casualty, it is the most easily repaired of any other roof now in use. Yet, the best proof we can offer as to its being both fire and water proof, are our many references, to any one of whom we are at liberty to refer.

N. B.—But let it be distinctly understood, (since we manufacture our own composition, and do the work in person,) that we warrant all our work proof against both Fire and Water; if they prove contrary, we will most willingly abide the results.

The materials being mostly non-conductors of heat, no roof is so cool in summer, or so warm in winter. Those wishing to use our roof should give the rafters a pitch of about one inch to the foot. [may 27, 1854.—4m.

SATURDAY EVENING.

How sweet the evening shadows fall,
Advancing from the west,
As ends the weary week of toil,
And comes the day of rest!

Bright o'er the earth the star of eve
Her radiant beauty sheds;
And myriad sisters calmly weave
Their light around our heads.

Rest, man, from labor! rest from sin!
The world's hard contest close:
The holy hours with God begin—
Yield thee to sweet repose.

Bright o'er the earth the morning ray
Its sacred light will cast,
Fair emblem of the glorious day
That evermore shall last.

Miscellaneous.

AN APPENINE ADVENTURE.

While stopping in Florence, at the "Casa del Bello," my companion and guide was James L. Grover, an American painter of some note, whom I had known well in the land of his nativity. It was Sunday evening, and on the following day I was to start for Bologna. Grover and myself sat upon one of the balconies of our chamber, engaged in conversation over our cigars, and after we talked awhile of the various things we had seen during the day, he asked me if he had ever told me of his adventure among the Appenines. I told him I had never heard it.

"Then I must tell it to you," he said, throwing away his cigar, and taking a sip of wine.

I lighted a fresh cigar, and he related to me as follows;

"Four years ago this summer, my brother and two sisters visited me here in Florence. They spent two weeks with me, and then started for Venice, by way of Bologna, where they had friends whom they were anxious to see. I should have gone with them had I not been engaged upon a work which I had promised to have done within a given time; but as it was, we made the thing work very well, for my brother expected two thousand dollars by the hands of a friend who was shortly expected from Rome, and it was arranged that I should take the money when it came, and bring it with me to Venice when I got ready, to meet them there. My brother left the necessary document for the obtaining of the money, and in due time I set out.

"On the very next day I was taken ill, and was confined to my bed a week, but I got out and finished my work just as my friend arrived from Rome with the money. He delivered it into my hands upon the production of my brother's written instruction, and I set the next Monday as the day on which I would start. I was really not fit to undertake such a journey, but I could not miss seeing my sisters once more before they returned home. I could have sent the money easily enough, but I promised myself too much pleasure with my dear relatives in Venice to miss it now.

"Monday morning came, and I could not arise from bed without assistance. A sort of neuralgic affection had seized all my nerves, and I was forced to stay in doors, and to resort to hot baths and medicine. But on the following morning I felt able to start, and I did so. Upon reaching Pistoja, I learned that there was no diligence to leave before next day. I could not stand this. I was already behind my time, and if the thing could be accomplished I must go on. There was a diligence under the shed, but no one to drive it.—'But can't we have some one?' I asked. 'If Signor will pay,' was the laconic reply. Of course I would pay; and though the sum charged was a pretty round one, yet I did not hesitate. The lumbering vehicle was dragged out; four miserable looking horses were attached, and then a yoke of stout oxen hitched on ahead of them. Two rough looking fellows were provided, one as a vetturino (postillion,) and the other to drive the oxen. Thus provided, I took my seat, and the diligence started.

We were to cross the Appenines by the pass of La Collina, and just began to ascend the rugged mountain path when I heard a loud hallooing behind, and in a moment the diligence stopped.

"What's the matter?" I asked, poking my head out through the opening by my side.

"Two men want to ride," returned the vetturino.

"But I hired the diligence, and am in a hurry; so drive off. If they wish to ride they must wait until to-morrow."

But the drivers were not to be governed thus.

"It won't make a bit of difference," they said. "We'll go just as fast; and besides they'll pay us something."

By this time the cause of all the trouble made its appearance in the shape of two dark-visaged, black-bearded, powerful men, who looked ugly enough for the incarnation of murder. I recognized one of them as a fellow whom I had seen hanging about the hotel at Florence, and the other I was confident I had caught a glimpse of just as the diligence left the pard at Pistoja.

I was upon the point of speaking when the thought occurred to me that I had better keep my knowledge of the Italian language to myself. I might find out the character of the fellows thus. I knew very well that further remonstrance would be useless, for the drivers were stupidly hoggish, and the new applicants were clearly not men to be argued with. The door was opened, and the fellows entered. I occupied the back seat, and they took the seat at the other end, fixing themselves so as to face me. They looked at me out of wicked eyes, and as they threw back their short cloaks I saw that they were well armed.

"Hope we don't trouble you?" said one of them in coarse Italian, as the diligence started on.

I gazed inquiringly into his face, but made no reply.

He repeated the remark.

"No comprehend, Signor," said I shaking my head.

"Ah—Englese?" he suggested with a shrug of his shoulders.

"No—Irish," I told him.

"Ugh!" he grunted, with another shrug of his broad massive shoulders, with an awful scowl of the face.

We had now begun to ascend the mountain in good earnest, and our pace was slow and lumbering. The fellow who drove the oxen made noise enough for an army, while the blows upon both oxen and horses fell hard and thick without accomplishing anything. Had I been alone I might have enjoyed the magnificent scenery which unfolded itself below as we crept up the Collina; but as I was I could not think of anything save the two men who forced themselves upon me.—Pretty soon one of them spoke, and though I appeared not to notice them, yet I could see that they were watching me closely.

"Death and destruction!" he uttered in his own tongue, "we shall be over the precipice if that drunken driver is not careful!"

I read the fellow's purpose in a moment, and not a movement betrayed my understanding of what he said. My eyes were half closed, and to all appearances I was unconscious even of their presence.

"He's right. He don't understand us," said one of them.

"All safe," returned the other.

After this they conversed together quite freely, and I was not long in having my worst fears realized. But not a change could they detect in my countenance. I kept my knowledge as secret as the very grave, and all my feeling was within me. After a while they became satisfied that I knew nothing of their language, and they became more bold in their speech, and talked their plan all over; and from them I learned the following highly interesting particulars:

The one whom I had seen in Florence had, by some means, learned that I was to carry a large sum of money with me across the mountains, and he had come on to Pistoja, where his confederate was, to await my arrival, intending to rob me there, if possible. But when they found that I was to go alone in diligence, they had a better plan. They would rob me on the mountain. The two drivers were friends of theirs, and were to be payed liberally for allowing themselves to be overcome. The villians talked about cutting my throat, shooting me through the head, or plunging a knife to my heart, and then throwing me over the precipice, as coolly as though they had been plapping the death of a fowl for dinner!—The place where they were to murder me was about a mile distant, where the road wound round a high crag, with an almost perpendicular wall of rock upon one hand, a deep chasm on the other.

This was an interesting position, sure enough. I was weak—weak at best—but doubly weak now with my illness—and the only weapon I had was a single pistol. Either of the brigands could have thrown me over his head with ease, and as for fighting with them, that was out of the question. What could I do? Both drivers were in league with them. If I leaped from the diligence I should die on the spot where I landed. If I shot one of the bandits, the other would annihilate me in a moment. I had the gold in a small traveling bag under my feet, and as the heavy carriages jolted over the stones, the yellow pieces jingled sharply, and I could see the eyes of the villians sparkle like stars.

At length the high craggy peak was in sight, and I could see where the road would abruptly round it. Thus far I had been torturing my brains to invent some way of escape, but without effect. I was as thoroughly bedged in as though bound by iron chains. And in a few minutes all would be over! Still I felt for my pistol and had it ready.

Presently the diligence stopped at the foot of an abrupt rise, and the fellow who drove the oxen came and told the bandits they must get out and walk up. They stepped out at once, and in a moment I heard a slight scuffle. I looked out just in time to see both the drivers lashed together by the arms, back to back. They must have been placed ready for the operation, for the thing had been done with incredible quickness. I drew my pistol, and awaited the result. My heart was in my mouth, but the intense excitement rendered me strong for the while.

In a few seconds one of the villians came and poked the muzzle of a huge pistol into my face.

"Gold Gold!" he said, "Give me gold or die!"

It was but the work of a second to knock his weapon down with my left hand, while with my right I brought up my own pistol and fired. The ball entered between the eyes, and he reeled back and fell. Then I leaped after him; for I saw his companion coming up on the other side. I hoped to gain the dead man's pistol, but ere I could do so the heavy hand of the living bandit was upon my shoulder, and his pistol aimed at my head. With an energy which the presence of death can alone beget, I knocked his weapon down, and grappled with him. He hurled me to the ground as though I had been a child; but before he could follow up his advantage, the postillion cried out:

"Hold, Mareo! a vettura is coming!"

The robber turned, and in a moment more a heavy vettura, with four horses attached, came round the corner full upon us. I started to my feet, and saw my brother looking from the window.

"Help! Robbers!" I shouted with all my might.

The bandit had taken aim at the veturino of the new team, but he was too late. My brother had comprehended the whole truth in a moment, and with a sure aim and a quick one too, he shot the villian through the heart.

"We secured my two drivers, and the matters were quickly explained. I told my brother all that had happened, and he then told me he had heard of my illness, and was coming back to see me. One of my sisters had been ill at Bologna, so that they had not yet gone to Venice, but were waiting until I should be able to join them. You can imagine how deep our gratitude was, and how fervently we blessed God for this fortunate interposition. My joy seemed to lift me from the pain I had suffered, and I felt better than I had felt for weeks.

"And what should we do next? Should we let the two rascally drivers go, and turn about for Bologna?"

"No," said my brother. "Our sisters won't expect us for three days; so we'll carry these villians back and give them up, and to-morrow we'll go over in my vettura."

We tumbled the two dead bodies into the diligence, and then bound the two drivers hand and foot, and tumbled them in after. The oxen were cast adrift, and my brother's vetturino mounted and started the heavy team back, while we resumed the control of the vettura ourselves.

The drive down the mountain was quickly performed, and the city of Pistoja was reached without mishap. The two dead men recognized as old offenders at once, and my testimony very quickly settled the business for the drivers. On the next night we were in Bologna, where my sisters received me with open arms, and two days afterward we were all in Venice.

So much for my trip across the Appenines.—And let me say to you; if you ever have
