105 The Empress Eugenie's cloak, as "described in late "Fashions," must be a "stunning" garment. It is made with two plaits behind, set on a deep yoke. The back and sides have a broad trimming of silk and chenille in diamond and star patterns finished with tassels. It has a square sleeve, richly fringed, with tassels on each point. The cloak is tied close, to the waste; the yoke is fringed, and the collar matches the side trimming.
