Hammonton Lands.

NEW ENGLAND SETTLEMENT—RARE OPPORTUNITY —TO ALL WANTING FARMS, in a healthy place, twenty-five miles from Philadelphia, on the Camden and Atlantic railroad, New Jersey. An old estate has recently been opened for sale, and the first division of 10,000 acres divided up into farms of twenty acres and upwards. The soil is of the best quality for the production of fruits, grains, &c. The price is $15 to $20 per acre, payable in easy quarter yearly instalments, within a term of four years, with interest. The terms are made easy, in order to insure the rapid improvement of the land, by enabling every industrious man to buy a farm. It is now being extensively improved by good roads, and some of the best citizens from New England and the Middle States are erecting large improvements. It is a scene of the greatest improvement out of Philadelphia. Seventy-five houses have been built in four months. Practical farmers and business men from the length and breadth of the Union are settling there. It is an important business place, on account of its being in the midst of a great market. Every article raised upon this land finds an immediate sale. The water is excellent, and no such thing as fever is known.

The soil is a sandy or clay loam, with a clay bottom and retentive of manures. It is free of stones and easily worked. It abounds largely in the phosphates, and such is its fertility that from the crops produced both upon this land and the large area adjoining under cultivation, it will be found not to be excelled anywhere in the production of crops most adapted to its market.

The reader may be assured that the earliest and the best fruits and vegetables come from New Jersey, which are annually exported to the amount of millions of dollars. The land, besides being accessible in every way for fertilizers, has an abundant supply of the best quality of muck manure.

Lumber and building materials can be had on the spot at reasonable prices from the mills. Other mills are now being opened and brick yards being started on the ground. A person can put up a frame tenement for present convenience for one hundred dollars. On account of the extensive emigrations this is the best course to pursue in order to get a place to live in at first. Carpenters and builders are on hand to put up houses on the best terms.

In settling here the emigrant has many advantages—He is within a few hours ride of the great cities in the Middle States & New England; he is near his old friends and associations; he is in a settled country, where every improvement and comfort of civilization is at hand; he is in a healthy place, and is not subject to the certainty of losing the greater part of his family and his own health by the malignant fevers which make the graves of so many millions of the young and hardy in far off regions away from home and friends. Besides, he has a mild climate and an open winter.

There are three trains daily to Philadelphia, and to all those who improve, the railroad company gives a free ticket.

The reader will at once be struck with the advantages here presented, and ask himself why the property has not been taken up before. The reason is, it was never thrown in the market; and unless these statements were correct, no one would be invited to examine the land before purchasing. This all are expected to do. They will see the land under cultivation; they will meet persons, no doubt, from their own neighborhood; they will witness the improvements, and can judge of the character of the population. Persons should come prepared to purchase, as many are locating, and locations are not held on refusal.

The Hammonton Farmer, a monthly literary and agricultural sheet, containing full information of Hammonton, will be sent to each inquirer, and can be obtained at 25 cts. per annum.

Title indisputable. Warrantee deeds given, clear of all incumbrance, when purchase money is paid. Route to the land—Leave Vine street wharf, Philad'a, for Hammonton by railroad, at 7½ a. m., and 5½ p. m.; when there inquire for Mr. Byrnes. Boarding conveniences will be found. Letters and applications can be addressed to S. B. COMPTON, 202 south Fifth street, below Walnut, Philad'a. Maps and information cheerfully furnished.

JAMES F. MAXWELL,

MANUFACTURER OF

Improved Fire and Water Proof

COMPOSITION ROOFING,

HARRISBURG, PA.,

RESPECTFULLY inform the citizens of Harrisburg, Reading, Lancaster, Lebanon, and their vicinities, that we are prepared to put on roofs on most liberal terms, and at the shortest notice.

We respectfully call the attention of persons about to build, to our invaluable method of roofing, now much used throughout the principal cities of the United States and their vicinities. This mode of roofing having all the combined requisites of cheapness, Durability, and Security against Fire and Water, and dispensing with high gable walls; the roofs require an inclination of not more than three-quarters (¾) of an inch to the foot, and in many cases saving the entire cost of rafters—the ceiling joist being used.

The gutters are made of the same material, without any extra charges; consequently, our roofs are put up at almost half the cost of either Tin, Slate, or Shingles. The material being of an imperishable nature, it surpasses all others in Durability;—besides, in case of any casualty, it is the most easily repaired of any other roof now in use. Yet, the best proof we can offer as to its being both fire and water proof, are our many references, to any one of whom we are at liberty to refer.

N. B.—But let it be distinctly understood, (since we manufacture our own composition, and do the work in person,) that we warrant all our work proof against both Fire and Water; if they prove contrary, we will most willingly abide the results.

The materials being mostly non-conductors of heat, no roof is so cool in summer, or so warm in winter. Those wishing to use our roof should give the rafters a pitch of about one inch to the foot. [may 27, 1854.—4m

Choice Poetry.

"DO YOU THINK HE IS MARRIED?"

Madam—you are very pressing,
And I can't decline the task;
With the slightest gift of guessing
You would hardly need to ask!

Don't you see a hint of marriage
In his sober-sided face?
In his rather careless carriage
And extremely rapid pace?

If he's not committed treason,
Or some wicked action done,
Can you see the faintest reason
Why a bachelor should run?

Why should he be in a flurry?
But a loving wife to greet,
Is a circumstance to hurry
The most dignified of feet!

When after the man has spied her,
If the graceful, happy elf
Does not haste to be beside her,
He must be beside himself!

It is but a thing may be—
But observe his practiced tone,
When he calms your stormy baby,
Just as if it were his own!

Do you think a certain meekness,
You have mentioned in his looks,
Is a chronic optic weakness
That has come of reading books?

Did you ever see his vision
Peering underneath a hood,
Save enough for recognition,
As a civil person should!

Could a cupuchin be colder
When he glances, as he must,
At a finely rounded shoulder,
Or a proudly swelling bust?

Madam!—think of every feature,
Then deny it if you can—
He's a fond, connubial creature,
And a very married man!

THE STOLEN RING.

CHAPTER I.

The cold January winds whistled and roared dolefully in at the crevices of the Widow Everett's humble dwelling; and the snow, which had been falling since early morning, filled the wintry air with fine cloud-like particles, and beat relentlessly against the miserable abode.

Within this humble dwelling it was almost as gloomy as without. A small quantity of coals gave out a dim, sickly light, barely serving to reveal the occupants of the cheerless apartment.—In one corner of the room was but a slight covering. There were no chairs—a few three legged stools serving instead. Poverty and want were there in ghastliness: and hunger, with wasted form, presided over the cold hearthstone.

A pale, attenuated woman was hovering over the fire, holding her almost transparent hands to the faint heat. Opposite to her, sat a younger person—her daughter evident—for the same marks of patient suffering were drawn around her small mouth, and upon her white, blue-veined temples. A garment of the most exquisite embroidery lay across her lap, upon which she had been employed until the early darkness had made work impossible.

"Letty," said the old woman, raising herself from the stooping posture which she had assumed, "Oh! that I could have lived to see my daughter—she whose infancy was so tenderly watched, so carefully cherished—oh! that I should live to see her starving! Oh! Heavenly Father! hast thou indeed forgotten me?"

"Hush, mother, hush," said the young girl, softly. "He can never forget! It is true that there are shadows around us, but He can make all bright," and Letty raised her blue eyes devoutly upward.

"You are young and hopeful, my child," said her mother; "you look only on the sun-shine and forget the shade. Heaven forbid that I should wish you to do otherwise; but oh, Letty, when I saw that gay, young girl yesterday, so full of happiness—so anxious to have that gorgeous robe wrought fair and tasteful I thought of my own buoyant youth and happy womanhood—of my wedded life, when I was the cherished of one good and noble—of the time when your infant eyes unclosed on life—of your guarded childhood, your happy youth—but dared I look farther?—Oh, Letty! the dark hours came, and your father was torn from us by death; and, added to all our grief and despair, we were penniless! Gloom only broods over us! Will the clouds never break? Will the sun of happiness never shine through? Letty, to-live thus——"

"Dear mother," said Letty, winding her arms about her parent's neck, "it grieves me to hear you speak so. I will work for you, mother—I'm ready and willing. My hands are young and strong, and my heart is hopeful. When Miss Josephine's dress is finished, I shall have twelve shillings; then we will have more fuel, and something nice for you to eat, mother! Miss Josephine, I know will pay me immediately: she must be good—she is so beautiful! Mother, is not every one good who is beautiful?"

"Alas! my child, would that it were so!" replied her mother. "Josephine Howard is very handsome; but report calls her heartless. Nevertheless, I dare say she is honorable towards all those she employs. But you cannot work to-night, Letty. There is no candle, and these poor coals give but a feeble light."

Letty laid aside the rich velvet which was to drape the queenly form of Josephine Howard on her coming birth-night; and opening the door, she looked out into the night. She shuddered as the cold wind penetrated her thin garments, and closing the door she returned to her mother's side.

"It is a fearful night mother," said Letty; "how thankful we should be for even this poor shelter!—there are others more destitute than we."

Fainter and fainter burned the fire, the storm demons howled more loudly, and the deep darkness grew deeper. Mrs. Everett and Letty crept shivering into the scanty bed, and sleep, which comes to both rich and poor, spread its rosy wings over them.

Morning dawned, cold and gray. The storm had ceased, but the sky was still over-spread by cold, heavy vapors. Letty Everett was early at her work, for it was to be finished on Thursday, and it was now Tuesday. Wearily the time passed, but the busy fingers stiched hopefully on the thought of the coming compensation making the arduous task comparatively easy. Thursday evening arrived, and the last stich being taken, Letty with a lighter heart than she had borne for many a day, put on her coarse shawl and faded bonnet, to take the fabric to its beautiful owner. With a buoyant step she threaded the busy streets, and halted before a palace-like building. Timidly she mounted the marble steps, and rang the bell. A richly clad servant ushered her into Miss Howard's boudier. Josephine sat on a damask lounge, chatting merrily to half a dozen young lady visitors, who were eulogizing a set of Brussels lace, which lay on the dressing-table.

"Ah, Miss Everett, you have brought the robe have you?" exclaimed the lovely creature, half turning as Letty tremblingly entered the apartment. "Well, let me examine it. So you have really kept your engagement, have you? Well, really, this is done very well," she said, drawing forth the work from its wrapping, and holding it up to view, "quite elegant, isn't it, Miss Lester? Crimson becomes me so well! You can go, young woman," she added, seeing Letty lingered; "I will come around in a week or two," and the young lady turned to the pier-glass to arrange a stray ringlet.

"But, madam," returned Letty, imploringly, "couldn't you pay me to-day? We are very much in need of the money, or I would not ask you," and tears, which she strove in vain to keep back, sprang to the beseeching eyes.

"Quite impossible, Miss Everett," said the haughty beauty; "besides, it isn't convenient.—If I give you your own price, you can afford to wait. I can not be troubled with these matters to-night. Twelve shillings can make but little difference. I will call around, as I said before, some time soon and pay you."

Letty passed once more into thronged streets. No fire! no bread! not a morsel of food! She had twice been refused credit by the chandler with whom they dealt; but food they must have. For her mother she would even beg. She bent her steps to the chandler's. Mr. Hardsoul was there, behind the counter as usual, ready to attend to his moneyed customers.

"Will you not let me have a loaf of bread, sir?" cried Letty clinging to the counter for support. "I will pay you in a fortnight, indeed I will, sir—all that we owe you."

"Young woman," returned the hard-hearted man, "whom do you take me for? I am worn to death with "Mr. Hardsoul, can't you trust me for this? and Mr. Hardsoul; won't you trust me for that? It is enough to try the patience of Job himself."

Without another word Letty left the shop and went home. Her mother divined all ere she could find words to express it; and putting her arms about the weeping girl, the mother and daughter knelt in prayer. Their devotions, however, were not finished, when a knock—a quick, impressive knock—aroused them, Letty arose to open the door, and two men in the garb of policemen entered.

"Good evening, madam—Mrs.——," said the elder. "Ah, Johnson, what brazen impudence! See, there is the very ring on her finger! Young woman," he said addressing Letty, "I confess that I am greatly surprised at seeing that ring so conspicuously displayed——."

"The ring!—what of the ring?" hastily asked Mrs. Everett.

"Oh, you are ignorant, ma'am, are you? Well, I'll enlighten you," said the official. "You must know that Miss Josephine Howard had presented to her a few days ago by a rich uncle a ring, of peculiar form and value, a serpent with emerald eyes. Well, shortly after receiving the present, a party of young friends having called, the ring was brought for their inspection. About the same time a certain young woman, whom Miss Howard had mercifully employed to do embroidery, came in with her work, and since then, the ring cannot be found about Miss Howard's room. The servant-maid declares that she saw this young woman take something from the table where the ring had been laid, and secrete it about her person; and a respectable tradesman, Mr. Hardsoul, afterwards saw the identical ring on her finger."

"The ring! Good heavens, you cannot mean it! The ring was given to my daughter by her dying father. She did not steal it. Heaven forbid!" exclaimed the agonized mother.

"It is all very fine prating, ma'am, and keeping us here, loosing our valuable time. The sooner you prepare yourself, Miss, to accompany us peaceably, the better," said the policeman, waxing wroth at the delay.

"My mother may go with me, if she likes, may she not, sir?" asked Letty, raising her beautiful though tearful eyes to the face of the stern man.

"No, not even if she likes," was the cruel reply.

That night Letty Everett slept within the walls of a prison.

CHAPTER II.

The court-house was thronged. The case was one of great interest. A beautiful young girl, who had once moved in the highest circles of society, was to be tried for theft. Every eye rested on poor Letty, who stood in the prisoner's dock, calm and composed, but colorless as the mountain snow.

The proofs against her were most conclusive. The ring found upon the finger of the prisoner not only corresponded exactly with the one stolen from Miss Howard, but the very initials of her uncle's name, Richard Elmington, were engraved on the inside!

The prosecution open the case. The attorney was an old experienced lawyer, and arbitrary withal. Miss Howard's dressing maid, a brazen-faced girl, of some five and twenty years, swore positively that she had seen the prisoner take some small article from the table where the ring had been laid, but a few moments before, and hide it about her person; and also that she appeared in a hurry to get away from the house.

Mr. Hardsoul testified to the defendant's having called at his shop to obtain trust for bread.—He had noticed at the time the curious ring, upon her finger, which he could identify with the one now exhibited in Court.

The case was about to be given to the jury, for Letty had no money to employ counsel, when there was a hurried movement near the outer door of the court house, and a stately, determined form strode into the arena.

"Counsellor Harrington!" was whispered thro' the crowd.

The new comer, after saluting the Judge upon the bench, approached the pale prisoner.

"The nature of the case excuses any liberties I am about to take," he said, addressing Letty.—"Allow me to inquire if you have no one to speak in your behalf?"

"Alas, sir," returned Letty, half raising her hopeless eyes to his face, "who would plead for the poor and fatherless?"

"God and justice!" returned Counsellor Harrington, emphatically; "and I, as their
