OBJECTIONS TO A LONG SERMON .-First-Sunday being a day of rest, none but men of genius can prevent an audience from going to sleep. Second-Sunday being the day upon which extra dinners are cooked, the physical is sure to predominate over the moral, and no man likes to feel that a good dinner is getting cold. Third-when a sermon is prolix, young ladies are apt to pacify their impatience by examining more intently the different styles of bonnets in · church. Young men to think whether they shall go skating after dinner, and boys to draw sketches of their grand-mothers from memory on the fly-leaf of the Bible or hymn book-they have been known to kill time by counting the bugles on a lady's collar or bonnet.
