The Naval saw Mr. Sickles for the first time after leaving his Appropriation bill was then considered in Comhouse, coming rapidly down Sixteenth street, on mittee of the Whole, but was finally laid aside, and the Senato's amondments to the other appropriation bills were acted upon.

CONGRESS.

MONDAY, Feb. 28, 1859. The appropriation bills occupied almost excluively the attention of Congress, to-day. In the Senate, after another refusal to take up the Homestead bill, Committees of Conference were appointed, to meet similar Committees from the House, relative to the disagreements on the amoudments to the Legislative, Executive and Judicial and the Consular and Diplomatic Appropriation ed to make an effort to strike with something in bills. Congress again, to-day, devoted its attention almost exclusively to the consideration of the Appropriation bills. In the Senate, the credentials of Mr. Douglas for another six years' term were presented. The Post-office Appropriation bill was taken up in Committee, and a clause was append. ed similar to that on the Post-routes bill, raising the rate of postage to five cents, and abolishing the franking privilege. It was agreed that the Postoffice advortising should hereafter be done only in the two papers of the largest circulation in each State, and two in Washington City. A motion by

Mr. Wilson, that Mr. Butterfield, the Overland Mail contractor, be allowed to carry the mails by any route he may choose, provoked a long debate, in the course of which it came out that the letters by that conveyance cost each from thirty-five to sixty dollars. The amendment was rejected The amendments adopted in Committee were subsequently acted upon by the Senate, and most of them agreed to. The bill was finally passed, 29 to 22. The Naval Appropriation bill was taken up at 10 o'clock at night. In the House, the Miscellaneous Appropriation bill was finally passed, after action on the Senate's amendments. The Ocean Mail Appropriation bill, after debate in Committee of the Whole, was tabled by the House, y eleven majority. The members seem to have ome to the conclusion that the contract system, so far as relates to the Ocean Mail service, is wrong and the business should be left open to competition. The Senate's amendments to the Army bill were acted upon in Committee; and will be finally
