A HIGH SPIRITED FAMILY. A REVOLUTIONARY SKECTH.

Just after the defeat of Col. Ferguson at King's Mountain, General Cornwallis in retreating towards Winnsboro' halted for the night at Wilson's plantation, near Steel Creek. The British General with his staff, and the infamous Tarleton occupied the house of Mrs. Wilson. Supper was ordered and prepared for the British officers. Cornwallis in order to obtain a knowledge of his hostess, entered into a conversation with her, and soon found that he was occupying the house of a noted whig leader, Robert Wilson, who at that time with his son, John, was a prisoner in the Camden jail, and who was the father and brother of more than a dozen active whig soldiers. The British General upon this, attempted to enlist the sympathies of his hostess in the royal cause. He observed that it was a matter of sincere regret with him, to be compelled to wage a war, the worst calamities of which fell upon women,-He was inclined to believe, that there were many worthy men in the rebel army, who had been induced to take up | arms by the delusive promises of unprincipled leaders. Ah! General! broke in Tarleton,-I think you've got into a hornet's nest! bad whiskey?" Never mind, when we get to Camden; I'll take good care that old Robert Wilson never comes back again!' On the next day's march a party of scouts captured Zaccheus, who was with his gun endeavoring to diminish his Majesty's forces. He was immediand catechised by Cornwallis, who took the boy along with him on the march, telling him he must act as guide to the Catawba, and show him the best ford. Arriving at the river, the head of the army entered at the point designated by have tried every way?" the lad, but the soldiers had scarcely gone half way across, before they found themselves in deep water-and drawn by a rapid current down the stream.-Believing that the boy, upon whom he had relied to show him the best ford, had purposely brought him to a deep pair of shoes, in case I succeed, I will one, in order to embarrass his march, the General drew his sword, and flour- can't raise a quarrel between them." ishing it over him swore he would cut so, as he had no arms, and was his priwould not be so cowardly; but then you place :know it would not be safe ?

Struck by the lad's cool courage, the General became calm. Having discovered the ford was shallow enough by bearing up the stream, the British army crossed over in safety, and proceed towards Winnsboro'.
