too late. The keys were found in the old man's pocket, and all three; rushing through the cathedral gate darted up the stairs, the sacristan, in the dread excitement of the moment, moving as swiftly as his young companions.

Albert, knowing the track of the trap-door, went through it first. 'Call out to him, lud!' exclaimed Master Joss. A breathless pause. I hear nothing stirring, said Albert, nor can 1 see anything from this. I'll climb over the rose.

Bravely did he surmount the perilous projection; and after a few moments of intense anxiety, he reappeared at the trap-door.

'There certainly is a figure standing on the rose, but 'tisn't Gabriel; tis a ghost!'

'A ghost! you dreaming dunderhead,' shouted Arnold. 'Let me up.' and he began to climb with the agility of a cat. Presently he walled out: 'Come on,

Speedily they gave him aid; and at length a half unconscious figure still wrapped in the banner, was brought down in safety.

They bore him into the 'Adam and Eve, laid him in a warm bed, and poured by degress a little wine down his throat. Under this treatment, he soon recovered his consciousness and hegan to thank his deliverers. Suddenly his eye fell on a mirror hanging on the wall opposite the bed and he exclaimed: Wipe the hoar trost off my hair, and that yellow dust off my cheeks! In truth, his curled locks were white, his rosy cheeks yellow and wrinkled, and his bright eyes dim and sunken; but neither hoar frost or dust was there to wipe away—that one night of horror had added forty years to his age!

In the course of that day, numbers who had heard of Gabriel's adventure, crowded to the inn and sought to see him, but note were admitted save the three who sattontinually by his bedside, his weeping young sister, the brave Arnold and Master Joss, the most unhappy of all; for his conscience ceased not to say in a voice present of your first born child, and that would be heard: You alone are the cause of all this.' By way of a little self-comfort, the sacristan used bine to declare, I'd give this moment full trap-door, and with feet and hands to do with gentlemen who wear horns hold of that Lawrence! If I only had that Ottkar by the throat! But

'Ah!' said Gabriel towards evening. 'tis all over between me and Annie. She would shudder at the sight of an old wrinkled gray-haired fellow like

A regular hail storm of kisses followed; and is said—how truly I know not-that somehow in the general melce Arnold's lips came into wonderfully close contact with the rosy ones of Gabriel's little sister. Certainly he was heard the next day to whisper into his friend's ear: 'A fair exchange is no robbery, my boy; I think if you take my sister, the least you can do is to give me yours. It does not appear that any objection was made in any quarter. Love and hope proved wonderful physicians; for, though Gabriel's hair to the end of his life remained as white as snow, his cheeks and eyes, ere the wedding arrived, had resumed their former brightness. A happy man was Master Joss on the day he gave his blessing to the young couplesthe day when Gabriel's sore tried love found its reward in the hand of his Annie.
