He, to wit, the incomparable Ivan, the Governar's valet. They were all returning home together from the brandy shop, careless and happy, singing love songs, cracking jokes upon jauntily on one side, and tacking WOOD and COAL YARD.

 Jauntily on one side, and tacking along the road in easy zig-zags. Duna ran towards them, pale, with staring eyes and flying hair; her neck uncovered—her wits bewildered.— "Come along ! quick ! quick !" she screamed. "He is hanging ! North LiGHT, (merchant.) Faster ! faster !"

"Woods," they all cried to her, with a SAVING FUND. laugh, "who is hanging ? Where is he hanging? Give us a kiss, Dunushqa. "Tis a merry world."

"He is hanging, I tell you! Don't laugh. Run to the house. Tako forks, hatchets, guns-a thief-a murderer; with great moustaches and a red nose ! He said he would slit my throat like a chicken's-that he'd hang me !"

They hastened their steps, armed themselves as well as they could, broke the house door open, went into the parlor. The robber had fainted : blood streamed from his mouth and nose; the arm by which he hung had grown nearly a foot longer. They took him down and bound him. After the return of the master and mistress of the house, he was conveyed the same evening to prison, and delivered into the hands of Justice land Justice could not but own, with astonishment, that never till then had so long an arm come before her.

THE PERPLEXITIES OF A CITY GIRL.

A Rich Joke Upon an Ardent Lover. The particulars of a very humorous series of misfortunes, happening - a young and ardent lover, of Sandtake, who came to this city to call upon and "talk sweet" to his inamorata, came to our notice yesterday.---The young man, as above intimated, is a resident of Sandlake, Rens., Co., (we have his name, but won't men-' tion it) and one day last week he put on his best "bib and tucker" and started for this city. Leaving home early in the day, he arrived in this city about 2 p. m.; and so after being shaved and having his hair dressed so Th that he might look "stunnin," he drove to the abode of the object of his attention. Arrived there he entered, leaving his horse and buggy at the door; the animal was of that class that would stand without hitch. The Monthly Magazines. ing. past seven when the blissful interview was brought to a close. But upon emerging into the street the horse and buggy were not to be found. Up and down the street he looked, but old Dobbin wasn't "thar." He grew alarmed, and finally ran around the block; but no signs of his vehicle and horse could be gained. The matter blocks, and still no tidings of his establishment could he gain. His first apprchensions were more than realized. His horse and wagon had certainly been stolen! And here he was some 14 miles from home.

In this dilemma, he bethought himself of his good friend Cleminshaw, of the Merchants' Despatch; and so procuring his aid they started in pursuit of the missing property. The aid of the Second District Police was invoked, and Officer Kipp, of Troy, was informed by telegraph of the robbery, as well as being furnished with a description of the horse and buggy. An hour's search by our police developed the fact that the animal being found "at large," by some of the Third District Police, had been taken to a stable near the Station House. This good luck on the part of our young friend, induced him to give those who had aided him in the search, an invitation to drink, and after imbibing he started for home.-But it had now become so late that he found it necessary to go home by the way of Troy. It was a tedious, round about way of getting home, but then he had his horse and buggy, and the assurances of the undying affection of the object of his fondest desires. Feeling thus, what should
