HOME AFFAIRS.

A BOILED DISH.—Almost every family has a dinner, as often as once a week, of what is popularly called a "boiled disb," and Which, properly conked, is one of the best dishes in the world; but all cooks do not know the best way to buil corned beef. The common methol, in order to make it tender, being to put it in cold water, and let beef and water come gradually to a boil. This certainly makes beef tender, but it also extracts affend strongth and jules. A botter way is to walt till the water boils before putting in the beet : It will then be equally tender, and "will retain all its strongthening and juicy propertes. Many housekeepers suppose that putting meat in hot water inevitably renders it hard and tough; and so it will, if the water is only hot; but if it boils, the effect will be the reverse. Just as putting a discolored table cloth in hot water will set the stains; but put it in boiling water and it takes them clean out. The same rule applies to all boiled meats. Hams, after boiling four or five hours, according to size, should be taken out, the skins taken off, and cracker or bread crumbs grated over them, and then baked in a brisk oven for one hour. A leg of mutton can be treated in the same way, only it does not require to be boiled so long. Of course, the boiling process should always be gentle.

PROGRESS OF TIME.—We observe that Grueff, the confectionery, is getting up a representation of the progress of time for the amusement and instruction of the public during the Holtdays. The room used in the summer as his Ice Cream Saloon, to which there is a side entrance, is occupied for the purpose. The representation is a kind of Stationery Panorama, commencing with the time of Christ, and coming step by step down to the present time. There will be actual minuture rivers, lakes, canals, railroad, oriental and American scenery—the temple and the fountain-the farm house and the high way, together with many minor attractions of beauty and interest. As considerable expense is incurred by the getting up of such a grand affair, a trifling admission for will be sharged.

SEASONABLE CAUTION. Wo would call the attention of those of our citizens will do not wish to be left in the light, to attend to their gas metres in time, and see that they are their proper condition for the winter. Fell.—A portion of the kitchen all attached to the Hotel of John M. Mark, in this borough, fell on Saturday evening into the yard, occasioning some fright and a considerable quantity of "ruin." They were digging a cellar underneath, and had not sufficiently propped the concern.

Loafers.—Lebanon, like all other towns, is infected with this detested class. They are not confined to any particular locality of the town, but are spread over it so profusely that it s with mortification we are compelled to acknowledge the fact. Around our corners and drinking houses do they most congregate, and during the evening they prop themselves against the houses at our principal street corners, waiting for "some thing to turn up," A cotemporary speaking of the loafer, says that he is the least understood and the least pitied of anything in the animal kingdom, and in his natural state is a study for the philosopher. He is idleness in its last analysis. His life is a blank cypher, a bubble, without even the animation necessary to move with the stream, which glides away from under him bearing with it the hopes and fortunes of humanity, but disturbs him not. He floats on the surface without an effort, though he may sometimes be whirled sluggishly around in some eddy upon which the lazy sunshine rests; but the first lit. tle puff of wind blows him out, and the stream runs on again without so much as the remotest ien, the misery, the degradation, the horrors, of the lonfer's condition seldom occurs, and can seldom be imagined. He does not live; he merely stays. His mind is a vacancy, and he never is that makes other men so active; and at the end of his nimless journey he shuffles off his mortal coil. A narrow space of mother earth, in an obscure field, which will soon be turned up by the plow share, wluds up his Moord? No slabsis raised to mark the spot, no turf is nursed around it by friendly hands, for he knows pour in death as he knew none in life. CONGRESS.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5, 1859. The 36th Congress commenced its session today. In the the Senate, 48 members present, a resolution of inquiry relative to the late Harper's Ferry raid, was introduced by Mr. Mason, of Virginia, and will be called up to morrow. In the House, the day was consumed in unsuccessful ballots for a Speaker. On the first ballot, Mr. Bocock, Dem., received 86 votes, Mr. Sherman-66, Mr. Grow 43, and some 35 scattering; mostly Americans. The Pennsylvania Opposition members voted for Mr. Grow, with the exception of Messrs. Morris and Millward, who voted for Mr. Sherman. An excited and noisy discussion followed, on Helper's "Impending Crisis," and these who had recommended the book were severely criticized. Mr. Daniel E. Sickles was in his seat. There would seem to be but little prospect of an early organization. The Republican strength is stated to be but 110.

TUESDAY, Dec. 6, 1859. In the Senate, to day, a long discussion was vestigation of the circumstances of the Harper's Ferry insurrection. Mr. Trumbull brought in the old Kansas difficulty as an amendment. Mr. Hale defined his position at length, denying the complicity of the Republican party in the affair. Mr. Davis, of Mississippi, expressed his gratification to find Senators so ready'to disavow sympathy with Brown's forny. Messrs. Green, of non County.
