MARVELOUS GYMNASTIC FEATS

Gallignani, Paris describes a most extraordinary performance which is now nightly attracting crowds to the Cirque Napoleon. Three trapezes, or pieces of wood about five feet long, suspended from ropes attached to the extremities, hang from the roof of the circus, one in the centre, and the others at about 40 feet distance at each side. A young man, named Leotard, ascends to a small platform arranged for him above the place where the musicians sit, over the passage for the horses into the ring. The trapeze nearest to him being put in motion, he catches it as it flies up, and then, after balancing himself carefully, he seizes it with his both hands, and darts into open space. After flying to the utmost extent of the ropes, he comes back with the recoil, and alights in safety on the spot from which he started. When he has done this two or three times, to show that the exercise is mere sport to him, he again launches himself into mid-air, but not this time to return as before; for then the trapeze has reached its furtherest point, he suddenly lets go his hold, and borne on by the impetus imparted, seizes the second trapeze, which in its turn carries him forward to the length of its rope, where he again quits it, springs to the third trapoze, and, borne forward by it, alights on another platform at the opposite side of the circus, and in face of that from which he had started. The performer again seizes the third trapeze, and, flinging himself forward, as before, flies to its further limit, and then quitting it, springs to the second, which, however, he does not leave, but permits it to fly back toward the third, then, as it decends, since his back is still towards the trapeze, which he quitted the moment before, he all at once lets go with both hands, and, turning in the air, seizes it again in time to meet the third, by catching which he again reaches the platform. Once more ascending to the platform above the orchestra, he springs forward, hanging by the hands to the trapeze, and quitting it as it approaches the end of its range, he gives a somersault in the air, and seizes the second trapeze as he descends! When it is considered how truly brain, eye and muscle must respond to each other in those performances, the whole exhibition must be pronounced one of the most extraordinary that has ever been seen of its peculiar description.

INDIAN STEPS.—Coming up the towing path of the Susquehanna Canal, a short time since, we had the curiosity to stop and view a curiosity on the route, called the Indian steps, one mile above McCall's Ferry, on the Susquehanna river. The curiosity to be viewed, consists in certain indentations, or steps, cut into a projecting rock in the river at that point, which tradition says, were made by the Indians, in days of yore, for the purpose of fishing for and dipping up shad from the turbulent waters of the Susquehanna, which at that place, rush impetuously down the side and base of the rock—There are three steps, or places, cut out of the face of the rock, which is rounding, the places or steps being originally well-shaped for a foot with a moccasin on it, in which the Indian stood to dip up the shad with nets made of bark, as the finny schools stemmed upwards the swift current. Modern fishers, however, have enlarged the steps, so as to admit a larger sized foot with a shoe on it, and have inserted a ring in the rock, a short distance back from the steps, to which a rope is attached and tied round the body of the fisher to prevent his going overboard, into the rushing waters beneath. We are informed that forty-one years ago, (in 1818) 10,000 shad were dipped up from that rock, in the space of one day, by 100 men, taking their turns at it through the day.—York Co. Star.

THUS IS LIFE.—If we die to day, the sun will shine as brightly and the birds sing as sweetly to-morrow. Business will not be suspended a moment, and the great mass will not bestow a thought upon our memories. Is he dead? will be the solemn inquiry of a few, as they pass to their work. But no one will miss us except our immediate connections, and in a short time they will forget us, and laugh as merrily as when we sat beside them. Thus shall we all, now in active life, pass away. Our childaen crowd close behind us, and they will soon be gone. In a few years not a living being can say, "I remember him!" We lived in another age and did business with those who slumber in the tomb. Thus is life. How rapidly it passes.

Boot and Shoe Store.

JACOB REDEL respectfully informs the public that he still continues his extensive establishment in his new building, in Cumberland st., where he hopes to render the same satisfaction as heretofore to all who may favor him with their custom. He invites Merchants and dealers in BOOTS and SHOES, and every one who wishes to purchase fashionable and durable articles in his line, to call and examine for themselves, his large and varied stock.

He is determined to surpass all competition in the manufacture of every article in his business, suitable for any Market in the Union. A due care is taken in regard to materials and workmanship; none but the best quality of LEATHER and other materials are used, and none but the best workmen are employed.

P. S.—He returns his sincere thanks to his friends for the very liberal patronage heretofore bestowed on him. He hopes by strict attention to business and endeavoring to please his customers, to merit a share of public patronage. [Lebanon, Feb. 17, '58.
