THE DREAM OF LOVE.

BY GEORGE P. MORRIS.

I've had the heart-ache many times, At the mere mention of a name;

Though from its inspiration came

Life-charished from the world apart-

But broods and nestles in the heart.

I've never woven in my rhymes,

A dove that never tries its wing.

It is in truth a holy thing,

Her artiess dalliance and grace--The joy that lighted up her brow-The sweet expressions of her face-Her ferm-it stands before me now! "And I can fancy that I hear The woodland songs shoused to sing, Which stole, to my attending ear, Like the first harbingers of spring.

The beauty of the earth was hers, And hers the purity of heaven! Alone, of all her worshippers. To me her maiden vows were given They little know the human heart. Who think such lave with time expires; Once kindled, it will ne'er denert But burn through life with all its fires.

We parted-doomed no more to meet-The blow fell with a stunning power-And yet my pulse will strangely beat At the remembrance of that hour! But time and change their healing brought, And years have passed in seeming gles But-still alone of her I've thought Who's now a memory to me

There may be many who will deem This strain a wayward, youthful folly, To be derided as a dream Born of the poet's melancholy. The wealth of worlds, if it were mine, With all that follows in its train, I would with gratitute resign, To dream that dream of love again,

THE SEA AND SHORE.

BY C. H. WEBB The Sea is a stern old monarch, Depotic as monarch may be, And his cousin, the Earth, from the time of his birth Has tribute paid to the Sea. Stout pilots turn pale when he toys with the gale, And ships bow their tall plumes down, If my monarch, the Sea, in a moment of giee, But noddeth his foam-crest crown.

The Earth is a sullen old baron, forose as baron may be, And he watches all day, from his rock-towers gray, For he feareth his cousin, the Sea. His wealth is untold, red masses of gold Lie hid in his treasure caves ; And my baron,s breast, is ever at rest, Though it bears a burden of graves.

Oh, the Sea is a cruel old monarch, As cruel as tyrant may be : fehore But of precious souls, more have been wrecked on the Than ever were lost at Sea!

In poor Rob in's Almanac for 1695 ther is the following : CHRISTMAS CAROL. Now, thrice welcome, Christmas, Which brings us good cheer, Mince pies and plum porridge, Good ale and strong beer ; With pig, goose aed capon, The best that may be. So well does the weather And our stomachs agr PROFITABLE RASCALITY .- A Paris letter states that a discoverywas recently made at the Paris mint which creates no little interest in commercial circle. For some time a well dressed individual had been actively engaged in pawning at the different offices of the Monte di Pete various ingots or bars of silver, which were accepted after the usual test, and then sent to the general depot of pledges, and again verified with similar result. Their number became so numerous, however, after a while, that suspicion was excited, the more especially as none of them were ever redeemed, and a number of specimens were sent to the mint to be assayed. Here it was found that the so:called silver was a fictitious metal, composed of antimony, pewter, lead, &c. These sub. stances were so dexterouly combined as to deceive the best judges, and the amount of metal which would be worth, in silver, nearly two hundred dollars of our money, was found to represent, in reality, a value of less than fifty cents. The individual who deposited them at the pawn office was arrested, when he declared that his fortune must be made, as he was the author of a discovery destined to accomplish a brilliant success. In this, Saddle and Harness Manuhowever, he will be disappointed, as the most profitable result of his discovery will proably be a few years board and lodging at the expense of the State. It seems that the composition employed so culpably and stupidly may be used in the manufacture of silverware with great advantage, and at an immense reduction of price.
