FROM NEW YORK TO SAN FRANCISCO.

orrespondence of the New York Times.
San Francisco, Monday, Dec. 5, 18-9.
Those who have tried the overland route, report it a jolly way to meet adventures, but death on women and children. We took the old fashioned route. Left New York on Saturday, Nov. 5, by the Bultic, having some side the opposition steamer. Cheers dinner on Sunday each passenger prewas designated his seat at the table. The order of the eating is, first, the second cabin passengers, then the and second tables are hurried up, and served at a speed that would endanger digestion on shore. The last table takes it as quietly, and is as well furnished, supplied and attended as at almost any first-class hotel. When second-cabin passengers are told, before starting, that they get just as good fare as those in the first cabin, there is a slight mistake made. Still it is good enough, sufficiently varied. and, for a man of tong-reaching arms and sharp-witted, abundant. Modest women don't succeed as well, until they have been educated into it. A great many very worthy people discovered, after they got on board, that the sleepingarrangements in the second cabin very essentially differed from those of the first In the latter nothing was left to be sensibly desired. In the former it is terrifically hot as you approach the tropics, badly ventilated, almost of necessity, and rather dark. The steerage consume their solt beef, boiled potatoes, hard
