Feb. 29. 1860. Cornwall Township.

THE Democratic citizens of North and South Cornwall Election Districts will meet on SATURDAY, MARCH 3, 1880, at 1 o'clock, P. M., at the public house of Leonard Zimmerman, in the borough of Lebanon, for the purpose of settling a ticket for the Spring election.

BY ORDER OF THE COMMITTEE. February 15, 1860.

As the out door season is now rapidly approaching, we call attention to a great nuisance heretofore practised with impunity. It is the squads of youngsters who make it their business to insult females who may passalong, or who may be desirous to take a view of the contents of the windows of stores or shops. Now as geods are put into these windows for the purpose of being displayed to the view of passing customers, it is a trying nuisance to have these fellows standing right in front of them, cursing and swearing and making indecent remarks.—

We know this is a free country, but the space in front of a shop-keeper's window is not part of continuous miles.

Was alguly one your sold last we diesals.

Success in the manufacture of Pig Iron .-- We understand the Donaughmore Furnace, which is situated in the western end of this Borough, and which has been in blast since Jan. bage stalk three years old, twelve feet high, and . 1859, has made, on an average, up to the present when in full leaf its circumference is equal to that time, 121 tons Pig Iron per week, consuming one of a fashionable lady in full bloom. and a half tons coal per one ton iron. This is an extraordinary and unprecedented yield. Credit is mainly due Col. D. S. Hammond, for his careful management, and Samuel Munfurd, for his skill as founder, at the above works.

ELECTION BILLS.—We have just printed blank election bills for the ensuing spring elections. Constables wanting them will please apply roon, as they must give 10 days' notice of the election. Price, 3 cents a copy.

Parents should bear in mind, aud exact from their children attending school, the records given by the Teachers at the end of each month. It not only shows the progress and conduct of the children, but also shows their attendance. We notice this, because we have reason to believe that some children whose parents are remiss in the matter, are in the habit of frequently playing truant. If the monthly record is exacted and examined every month it will be a check, at least to truant playing.

BUTTER WITHOUT CHURNING.—Mr. Jno. Shepherd, of west Goshen, Chester county, has a very remarkable cow. She yields cream which turns into butter without churning. We were shown, a few days since, a specimen of cream gathered on a pan of milk, which had stood over night. It was the consistency of hard frezon ice cream. Mr. Shepherd assired us that frequently his failily made butter in the morning for breakfast; by taking cream and stiring it around a moment with a stick. The cow is about five years old—three fourths Durham. She yields tweive pounds of butter per week, six menths after calving. So says the West Chester Record. BUTTER WITHOUT CHURNING .- Mr. Jno. Diseases of the Chest and Lungs. Diseases of the Chest and Lungs.—These diseases are too well known to require any description. How many thousands are every year carried to the silent grave by that dreadful sourge Consumption, which always commences with a slight cough.—Keep the blood pure and healthy by taking a few does of JUDSON'S MOUNTAIN HERR PILLS each week, and disease of any kind is impossible. Consumption and Lung difficulties always arise from particles of corrupt matter deposited in the air-cells by bad blood.—Purify that stream of life and it will very soon carry off and destroy the poisonous matter; and like a crystal river flowing through a desert, will bring wiff it and leave throughout the body the elements of fertility in its course, causes the before barren waste to bloom with flowers and fruit, so pure blood causes the frame to rejoice in strength and health, and bloom with unfading beauty. Judson's Mountain Herb Pills are sold by all Medicine Dealers.

For the Advertiser. WINTER EVENINGS. Many days have come and passed away, since the bright summer fled from the flower strewn mountain sides, from the low, green valleys, and the deeply shaded wood. While these in their verdant bloom bathed in the last rays of the setting sun, we could say: "What a bountiful sum-mer evening;" but a sad change came, leaf after leaf fell from the wood bower, until the intertwined frame work of trunks was left bare; flow-er after flower drooped and died, until at last ev-erything wore the brown, sable garment of au-tumn; and now, when we see the bright sun sink to its slumbers in the West, we say: Oh! what a when surrounded by earthly pleasures; but the winter too has many golden joys.

When we look out into the deep darkness of the night; though the winds mean, now howling among the trees, now murmuring in a low, mournful cadende on the house top; perhaps the frozen earth wearing her spotless white, and many more flakes still coming silently, gently from the plouds to cluster among the fallen ones—this indeed looks cheerless, but here and there, low down the property of the reas a star glimmers brighter than among the trees, a star glimmers brighter than those other little lamps hanging away up in the sky. Each of these stars shines on a home.— Like the sun that lights up the great outer world, so these evening lamps light up the little inner world of a home. Let us turn from the cold win-ter without, and see what winter ovenings are in world of a home. Let us the state of the wind of a home. Let us the state of the without, and see what winter ovenings are in these rural cottages. We will just look in one through the window. See how many youthful forms cluster around that same little star, as it reflects its light on each countonance in a glowing brightness; two aged pair are seated in their ing brightness and the pair are aged aged pair are aged pair are aged pair are aged reflects its light on each countonance in a glowing brightness; two aged pair are scated in their midst; the fire on the hearth burns cheerfully and struggles to surpass the flickering lamp, and well it may, for on the heart hearths of this home, the fires of love and affection over burn the same strong, unextinguishable flame, and they spread their warm glow or each face. Here then dwell the golden joys of winter; here in these happy homes, there are no dreary winter evenings, no; the golden joys of winter; here in these happy homes, there are no dreary winter evenings, no; they all have something to do, and from the bright nnimation that plays on those blooming cheeks, and the more tranquil, peaceful smiles that rest on those care-worn brows of the aged pair, it is evident they do not heed the storm without.

Let us of forth again into the shower of snow evident they do not heed the storm without.

Let us go forth again into the shower of snow finkss, and see whether there is to human life struggling in the white sea of cystals. Yes, there in the distance, a dark figure cones toiling slowly through the snow; the cruel noth wind fans widly the idy cheeks of that lone wanderer, and she puts out her numbed hands, and grees the heavy shawl to hold it closer around hydroping frame; and closer still she draws it around that little bundle in her arms. What is it? It is human life; see how foundy shepresses it? It is human life; see how fondly she presses it to her bosom, but the "bitter cold" only comes nearer, to print the death kiss on that infant bud. It was for her baby boy, that she has tolled and struggled through the long winter evening;—she did not care to die, hours ago, she would have of snow crystals cease not their journey from the clouds. Now the steps become feebler, slower, reaper too, stands in their midst, ready to reap any of those fair flowers. How quickly he might put forth his whithering hands, and cause the lovliest of those flowers to fade. Take heed then, ye reckless group, in these your early years of bloom, lest yo be not on your guard, when "the Son of man cometh as a thief in the night." But we must draw other pictures.

Here before this humble cot we will stop; the window is low and the light within is dim, but The Board of Revenue Commissioners at we can see all. Poverty is here the chief occupant; it is written every where on the ancient furniture. The bods of straw, the bare white floor, the broken chairs, the last dying embers that burn feebly on the hearth, all tell of the reign of Poverty; but Oh! how deeply she has stamped her name in long lines of suffering on the thin pale faces of that little bousehold group;

> What a beam of Heavenly peace rests on that received the bread of life, and they care not that those last dying embers have fallen to ashes, for the love of God so attack their hearts. The faithful mother tells them it matters little whether the paths of life be strewn with roses, or whether thorns only grow there; if the soul liveth in faith the "thouser the cross the richer the whether thousanty grow there; it the soft average in the soft average converted in the stock is light. Business generally is improving, and there is every prospect of a healthy trade the coming spring. We quote: a moment more, and every head is bowed low in FLO guides these youthful hearts upwards to the throne of grace. Here too dwell those golden winter $\frac{\partial conditions}{25.00}$. RYE or grace. Here too dwell those golden winter joys. Poverty may press the very life blood out of the veins of these, Christ's sheep, discontentment cannot even cross the threshold of their foliac.

the beggar child was frozen to death.

Reader, in which ever of these ways you spend your winter evening, be watchful that your last evening be not a droary winter evening. So let the Father guide your heart that when the eve-ine of your life comes, there beno winter gloom in your soul, but the spring budding of that summer, which blooms forever, beyond the distant blue skies.

Her little head sinks upon her bosom; she put forth the slender hand to see stopped to rost. Her little need sinks upon her bosom; she put forth the slender hand to sup-port it, for she has wept until it grew sore; the icy fingers cool the burning brow, and she calls it "rest." Scarce ten summers have passed over that sunny head, and yet, she is a child of suffering; yes, deep untold suffering has thinned that sweet young face; no childish rosiness is there, no, they have long since faded. She tells us nothing, but the half smothered sigh, and the there, no, they have long since faded. She tells us nothing, but the half smothered sigh, and the large teardrop that rolls down those wan cheeks tells the sad tale. There was a time, when she was the happiest of children, but God sa w fit to lay a heavy cross upon her, and now, she had nothing but a sick mother, who was slowly starving away her feeble life. All day long had she wandered about the streets to seek relief, and now it was night, and still, there was none to help. She thought over the finished labors of the day, and Oh! how her heart ached as she remembered those evil words that had pricked her young heart like a thorn; it was this that caused the tears to flow, and the sigh to escape. But young heart like a thorn; it was this that caused the tears to flow, and the sigh to escape. But she had rested now, and she went forth—again to beg. Oh! that it should have come to this, but she could not let her mother die. She soiled the marble steps of many more mansions with her bleeding feet, many more thorns pricked her ach-ing heart, but no more tears did she shed, she had wept until the fountain was dry. Thus did the beggar child spend her last winter evening; yes, her last, for she had stopped to rest once more, but she rose no more. She had been driven from the last door, it had been denied her what she timidly asked, but she received it in Heaven:—
