Wandering over the magnificent grounds surrounding Johnson Hall, she encountered an elderly lady, dressed in deep mourning, accompanied by two beautiful girls, in whose sweet young faces Margaret read their relation to William Johnson. These, then, were the children, and although she had heard with a strange joy, for which she despised himself, of the death of his wife, she could not retain such feelings when she thought of these lovely girls, left without a mother, as she herself had been—perhaps, some day drifting like herself upon the outer circle of a happiness which she could never hope to know. Then came the remembrance that had it not been for her folly, she might have been a wife and mother; the wife of him she indeed worshipped, and the mother to his children. Determined to have a single look,

GARIBALDI'S MARRIAGE.—The Paris correspondent of the Courrier des Etats Unis gives a melancholy ac count of Garibaldi's last matrimonial experience. Miss Raimondi, the lady whom he espoused it seems is a person of worthless character, and at the time of her nuptials was enciente by an Italian, who soon after the marriage communicated anonymously the story of her disgrace to Garibaldk-He, (Garibaldi) it is said, didn't want to marry her, but she was young and handsome, and vanity overcame his judgment; he was, moreover, persuaded by her father. Upon the receipt of the note exposing the deception practiced upon him, the patriot left his bride, to hide the chargin in a neighboring island. At first Garibaldi thought the note came from inimical Austrians; but alas! the signature was indeed that of an Italian, ed by her father. The Republican Legislature at Columbus, Ohio, treated with disrespect, the other day, a petition asking that a day be set apart for humiliation and prayer. The next day a petition was presented asking the Legislature to make an appropriation for an oyster supper, somewhere up in Cheesedom, which is referred to the proper committee. The Republicans of that body evidently think their case past the efficaceay of prayer, and therefore act on the idea of the fatalist, "Let us eat, drink, and be merry, for the omorrow we die."
