"Nay, my weight is not half so great as yours. Let go my arm; I will go. Hold the ladder." Carl did not hold the ladder very carefully .-He warned the climber against the broken round near the top; but no sooner was the ladder unencumbered than he threw it on the ground and himself alongside of it, and rolled around in a perfect paroxysm of laughter.

Does any reader require to be told that, for the second time, Death was in the power of Carl Todschalk !

EXECUTIONS IN CONSTANTI-

How an execution is conducted in Constanti nople is described in the Levent Herald of March 7, which says—Ga Sunday morning the wife and her paramour; the further of the late Ferik Ibrahim Pacha Fuffered "the last penalty of the law" at the Stamboul end of Karrkeui bridge.—As the sentence of the condemned couple had been confirmed several days before by the Sultan, it would have been immediately carried into effect but for the difficulty of finding an executioner, the popular feeling as to such services when or, the popular feeling as to such services being now widely different from what it was in the "good old times," when the bowstring and the soimeter were seldom a day unused. At last, however, the (considered) high wages of 500 piasters ever, the (considered) high wages of 500 piasters induced a gipsy to undertake the job, and on Sunday morning, accordingly, this, new, unusual tragedy was performed in the area in front of the fowl shops beyond the bridge. Shortly after 5 o'clock (Frank time,) the prisoners were brought from the Zaptich prison, under a guard of soldiers and cavasses—the man on foot, with his hands tied behind him, the women in a sedan chair. On arriving at the end of the bridge, the guard formed into a half-circle, shutting out the crowd of fifty or sixty pecple who had gathered behind them on the way from the Zaptich. The woman was then handed out of the chair, and, from the sudden tremor which seized on her, after catching sight of two upright poles with their ter catching sight of two upright poles with their grim crossbeam, and the movements of prepara-tion amongst the guard, it was evident that what could at most have been only a suspicion in her mind before then flashed into a terrible certainty. She moaned piteously at first, then broke into low cry of "aman, aman," (mercy, mercy, mer-oy,) and asked what they were going to do with oy,) and asked what they were going to do with her. She was told—"therely to exile her," and thus partly quieted, though still monning and quivering with terror, was led into the black khan at the corner of the street. There she was immediately seized and pin loned, acreaming and struggling fearfully the while, till the noces, rapidly slipped over her head and pulled at oither end by a cavase, had done its quivering work.

Then had was then carried out and hung m on Then body was then carried out and hung up on the frail gallows for it. Whilst this half of the tragedy had been in course of accomplishment within the khan, the male culprit had suffered his punishment outside. "I know that I have acted ungenerously," Carl said, "but then my affairs are in sad disorder, and my farm would go to ruin were I to leave it now. I will set about putting things to rights this very day."

I am compelled to state that things were not put to rights tempt made thereat by him. When exactly five minutes of the six months extorted by Carl, had expired, he commenced costing about him for some means of extending still further his allotted time; and this occupation was by him continued, day with placards announcing their orime stitched to the front of both. From the report of Mr. Tremenheers to the House, we select a few instances of barbarities inflicted upon the poor British white slaves by their task masters. A finisher in a bleaching establishment, went to work one at five o'clock, establishment, went to work one at the detect, and labored assiduously until six the morning after, as did all other hands, including children. Though a strong, healthy man, he had so tired frequently when he arose in the morning that he had to sit at his bed-side with scarcely power to dress himself. What then must have been the condition of the girls and boys? Three young girls, the oldest but sixteen, worked, in a similar establishment, thirty-nine hours with but two hours sleep in the clothes, and an allotment of onlf an hour to breakfast. A lad of seventeen had labored three days and three nights, and subing. A long category was in possession of Mr. Roebuck, the ardent advocate of the bill, showing instances of children's hands being blistered toil on, their overseers being sometimes forced to keep them awake by beating the table with large

The actuating motive of all this cruelty was mane institutions. No slavery in our Southern States, equals the cruel servitude imposed by them upon their weak, belpless and distressed white laborers. It was through the agency of these hypocritical philantropists that Abolisionism crept among us, with its slimy body, and their commissioned interlopers, by pouring distilled poisons into too willing minds, and imparting false ideas to the unmatured young, have executed their culpable designs by imperilling the country in the togging about sectional strife. The cruel syspable designs by importing the county is bringing about sectional strife. The cruel system of slavery in England has not terminated with the passage of this bill. There are so many ways of evading law there, that an amelioration of the condition of their white slaves will not eventuate from it, nor never will while cupidity has such potency.

In this condition of affairs it now remains with loyal citizens to repel the insidiousness of this active foe, the first step towards which is to elect as the great head of the Nation one who will with energy prosecute the work of redeeming the people from such heated strife.—PERMETLYANIAN.

It is saveloped in thick darkness, never, it may be presumed, to be penetrated by human research; and yet the ruins of ancient cities are frequently discovered that tell of a race that has long since passed away-probably exterminated by the ancestors of our present Indians, who are also fast departing from the human family-fairly dying out before the everadvancing influence of the pale face. The city was probably built by a warlike race us it is quadrangular and arranged with skill to afford the highest protection against an exterior foe, many of the buildings on the outer line being pierced with loopholes, as though calculated for the used of weapons. Several of the buildings are of vast size, and built of massive blocks of a dark gravite rock; which could only have been wrought to their present condition by a vast amount of labor. There are ruins of three noble edifices, and presenting a front of three hundred feet, made of ponderous blocks of stone, and the dilapidated walls are even now thirty-feet high. There are no partitions in the area of the middle (supposed) temple, so that the room must have been vast; and there are also carvings in bas relief and fresco work. Appearances justify he conclusion that these silent rains could once boast of halls as gorgeously decorated by the artist's hand as those of Thebes and Palmyda. The buildings are all loopholed in each side, much resembling that found in the old feudal castles of Europe, designed for the use of archers. The blocks of which these edifices are composed are cemented together by a species of morar of a bituminous character, which has such teacity that wast masses of wall have fallendown, vithout the blocks being detached by the shock. We hope, ere long, to be favored with full and descriptive particulars, as it is probable that visits and examinations will be made amongst such interesting relies of the unknown past by some of the United States officers attached to the nearest
