FRIGHTFUL ADVENTURE.

My horse had cast a shoe, and topping about sunset at a blacksmith's cabin in one of the most savage passes of the Alleghenies, a smutty-faced, leather aproned fellow was soon engaged in putting his feet in order, to encounter the flinty rock we were traveling. 'Pardon me, sir,' cried a middle-aged traveler, riding up to the shanty and throwing himself from his horse, just as the shaggy-headed vulcan, hav-ing taken the heels of my nag in his lap, was proceeding to pare off the hoof preparatory to fitting the shoe, which he had failmered into shape, and thrown upon the black soil beside him. 'Pardon me,' repeated the stranger, raising his broad-brimmed beaver from a head remarkable for nothing but what the phrenologist to be a dozen miles hence before under singular obligations by allowing this good man to attend my lame beast immediately.'

The confident and graceful manper in which the stranger threw himself upon my courtesy, sufficiently marked him as a man of breeding, and I of course complied with his request by giving the necessary orders to the blacksmith. His horse was soon put in traveling trim, and leapgained the highway with a bound; checking his course then a moment, bright autumnal crescent was just be his chest, escaped them. he turned in his stirrups to thank me for the slight services I had rendered him, and giving an address, which I have now forgotten, he added that if ever I should enter ____'s valley, I might be sure of a cordial welcome from the proprietor. An hour afterward I was pursuing the same road, and rapidly approaching the end of my day's journey. Phe immediate district through which was traveling had been settled by Germans, in the early days of Pennsylvania—a scattered community that had been thrown somewhat in advance of the more slowly extended settlements. In populousness and fertility it did not compare with the regions on the eastern side of the mountains; but the immense stone barns, which, though few and far between, occasionally met the eye, not less than the language spoken around me, indicated that the inhabitants were of the same origin with the hardy and industrious denizens of the lower coun-
