Choice Poetry.

THE LITTIE BOY THAT DIED. The late Dr. Chaimers is said to have been the author the following beautiful lines, written on the occasion f the death of a young son, whom he greatly loved :

I am all alone in my chamber now.

And the midnight home is near.

The faggets crack and the clock's pull click
Are the only sounds I hear;

And over my sould it is solitide.

Sweet feelings of sadness gide;

For my heart and eyes are full when I think
Of the little boy that died.

I went one night to my father's house Went home to the dear ones all; went nome to the dear ones any and softly I opened the garden gate.

And softly the door of the hall;
My mother came to meet her son—
She kissed ine and then she signed,
And her head fell on my neek, and she went
For the little boy that died.

I shall miss him when the forers tune.
In the garden, where he played;
I shall miss him more by the fireside
When the flowers are all decayed;
I shall see his toys and his empty chair,
And the horse he used to ride,
And they will speak with a silent speech
Of the little boy that died.

We shall so house to are Father's house—
To our Pitter's house in the skiet.
Let the these in source self leve no blight.
Our love no broken ties:
We shall roam on the banks of the river of peace
And bathe in its bliggful tide,
And one of the joys of life shall be
The little boy that died.

THREE WILD STORIES.

which for wilderness equal the most fantastic dreams of the Hindoos .of an aspiring genius. With these tales, in a condensed form, we pre-sent our readers. A tribe of Samoyedes, seven hunall maintaining the dignity of their office by devoting their time, talents, and energies to the single purpose of dining out. Six of these great men were childles, but the other, the eldest, had a boy, who, far from sharing in the family proposity, never went out at all, but shored away his exist ence in bed. On one occasion, when a great festival was coming off, the father of this feavy youth asked him to join in the varty, but he refused to join in the party, but he refused with a yawn, illeging as an excuse that had a bad iream, which showed him that all the seven chiefs would

The father taighed at the dream; but, when the next morning dawned, the horrible reality far exceeded the dismal prediction for the youth, opening his eyes; found that not only the seven chiefs; but the whole seven hundred personages, with the reindeer and dogs, had ome to an untimely end. The trightful spectacle aroused him to unwonted activity, and, having first cut all the presoft hat the end of some mobility, he found too much for his strength, especially as he was not fortified by a particle of food. At last he cange to the site of a former encampment where he found a bone, which had been already gnawed by the dogs, but which, in the present emergency, was not to be a cassial the form the father as a supernaturally gifted beauty for his strike the first blow.
