THE CORNER.

A FROZEN Sair .- A whaling vessel which sail od from London in the year 1849, found in the Polar sea, a ship embodied in the ice, with sails furled, and no signs of life on board. The cap-tain and some of the crew descending into the cabin found coiled upon the floor, a large Newtain and some of the crew descending into the cabin found coiled upon the floor, a large Newfoundland dog apparently asleep but when they touched it, they found the animal was dead and frozen as hard as a stone. In the cabin was a young lady stated at a table her eyes open, as if gazing at the intruders in that devolate place.—She was a corpse! and had been fozen in an apparently religious attitude. Besides her was a young man, who it appeared, was commander of the brig, and brother to the lady. He was sitting at the table, dead and before him was a sheet of paper on which was written. "Our cook has endeavored since yesterday morning to strike a light, but in vain: all is now over." In anothmatic tuder in hand, frozen in the vain endeavor to strike the fire that could alone save them. The terrors of the seamen hurried the captain from the spot, who took with him, a log-book as the sale memento of the ill-fated ship. It appeared that she also was from London, and had been frozen in that place over 14 years.

the (Newell) Picture is more life-like than any thing; they ever saw. My likeness has been repeatedly taken, by different Artists in various ways, but I have neveryet had ene which presents so true to nature, all thefeatures and expressions of countenance as this.

The exquisite finish, beauty and softness of your portraits, conjoined with their durability of color and faishfulness as likenesses, samot fail to commend them to the attention and patronago of all who appreciate true
