Choice Poetry. THE MORNING LAND OF LIFE.

I dwell in a bright land far away— A beautiful morning land— Where the winds and with birds sing all day.

Yet, when I look on the face of the sea, I see the waves and the sun and the sky, And the clouds and the birds and the flowers.

Miscellaneous. A FIGHTING CLERGYMAN IN 1776.

[The following incident is located in an article in the April Knickerbocker, by J. T. Headley.] New England, after the defeat of Burgoyne, seemed for a while to be left out of the war, so far as any invasion of her territory was concerned.

But in the midst of its tranquility, a rumor reached New Haven that the British were about to make a descent upon it. The place was immediately thrown into a state of the greatest alarm and excitement.

When the detachment reached the grove the officer commanding it saw to his amazement only a venerable man in black, quietly loading his fowling piece to have another shot.

The volunteers in their retreat torped the bridge over the river after crossing it, thus compelling the British to march two miles further up the stream before they could effect a passage.

In the meantime the exciting news came that Tyrone, with a force of twenty-five hundred had landed at West Haven, only five miles distant, and was about to march directly on the place.

But while they were marching along, a cloud of dust was seen to rise along the road toward New Haven, and soon a solitary horseman appeared in view, galloping fiercely forward. They at first thought it was some messenger sent to overtake them; but when the rider drew near, they beheld, to their surprise, President Dagget on his old black mare, with a long fowling piece in his hand.

Having a strong constitution, he recovered, however, and was able a part of the year to preach in the chapel, but his system had received a shock from which it could not entirely recover, and in sixteen months he was borne to the grave.

As far as the eye could reach on either side, the green fields were red with scarlet uniforms, the extending wings ready at the word of command to enfold them and cut off every avenue of escape.

It is a complete arsenal of the weapons of smuggling, all, unfortunately in complete confusion.

One day, the carriage he belonged to was stopped by a crowd at the gate. There was as usual, a grand chorus of yells and oaths, the vocal part being performed by the drivers and cartmen.

The first night one of the revenue people drank up one soldier, and was soon bound to death. It is now six years since he lost the moisture of his system, and was reduced to a dry skeleton.

Powder Mills.—Great fears are expressed for the safety of Dupont's powder mills, in Delaware. We learn from a well informed source that they have not yet been in danger, but it is quite evident that nothing ought now to be trusted to chances.

As they entered the streets of the town the soldiers composed shooting the peaceable citizens whenever they dared to show themselves, and as one after another fell in his sight Dr. Dagget expected his turn would come next.

A FAMILY PAPER MONTHLY AND QUARTERLY, IS PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY WM. M. BREESLIN.

MURDER WILL OUT. A young butcher, who lived with his mother near Smithfield Bars, was better known in the neighborhood than he was in the market, and was generally accounted as a great rascal.

SMUGGLING. A gentleman from Paris writes the following: I saw through one of the windows of the Mayor's office, in the twelfth arrondissement, what seemed to be the body of a negro hanging by the neck.

When the murder was discovered in the course of the next day, suspicion was at once excited that he had been her assassin.

Some people conjectured that he had escaped to foreign parts; others that he had fallen into the river and been drowned, but nothing was known with certainty for many years after.

These angry words collected a crowd of idlers, who were drinking in the tap-room, and among them a parish constable, who immediately took both into custody.

On the examination of the prisoners, it appeared that the butcher, who took a boat with them on the night of the murder, boasted of the money he possessed, and that they agreed to rob and murder him, and in this attempt they succeeded, stabbing the man, taking his money, which they shared between them, and throwing the body overboard.

LETTER FROM ARCHBISHOP HUGHES. The following letter from Archbishop Hughes was addressed to the President of a Union Meeting in New York city held in Union Square last week.

Dear Sir.—Unable to attend the meeting at Union square, in consequence of indisposition I beg leave to state my sentiments on your coming together in the following words: Ministers of religion and ministers of peace according to the instructions of the Divine Master I have not ceased to hope and pray that peace and union might be preserved in the great and free country of America.
