DEPARTMENT OF ART AND LITERATURE The following quaint and rare old poen, was written by Thomas Carew, in the early part of the seventeenth century. We hazard the opinion that there is nothing iner, of its kind, in the languago:

A SONG! It is not beauty I demand,
A'aystal brow, the Moon's despair;
Nor the snow's daughter, a white hand,
Nor mermaid's yellow pride of hair.

Tell me not of your starry eyes, Your lips that seem on roses ted, Your breasts where Cupid sleeping lies, Nor sleeps for kissing of his bed!

These are but gauds, may what are lips? Coral beneath the ocean stream. Whose brink; when your adventure sips, Full of the perishes on them. And what are cheeks but ensigns oft.
That wave hot youth to fields of blood?
Did Helen's heart, though ne'er so soft.
Do Greece of Hillium any good?

Eyes can with baleful ardor burn, Poison can breathe that erst perfumed: There's many a white hand holds an urn With lover's hearts to dust consumed. For crystal brows, there's nought within, They are but empty cells for pride, He who the syren's hair would win Is often strangled in the tide.

Give me, instead of beauty's bust, A tender heart, a loyal mind, Which with temptation I could trust, Yet never linked with error find.

One in whose gentle bosom, I Could pour my secret heart of woes, Like the care burdeped honey fly That hides his murmure in the rese.

My earthly comforter, whose love
So indefeasible might be,
That when my spirit went above
Here could not stay for sympathy. NEVER COURT BUT ONE.

I have finished it, the letter
That will tell him he is feee,
From this hour and forever.
He is nothing most to me;
And my heart feek, lighter, gayer,
Since the deed at last is done—
I will teach him that when courting
He should never court but one.

Every body in the village
Knows he's been a wooing me,
And this mcruing he was riding
With that saucy Annie Lee.
They say he smiled upon her,
As he cantered by her side,
And I'll watrant you he promised
To make her soon his bride. But I have finished it, the letter,

From this moment he is free—
He may have her if he wayts her.
If he loves her more than me.
He may go—it will not kill me—
I would say the same, so there,
If knew it would, for firting
Is more than I can bear.

It is twilight, and the evening
That he said he'd visit me—
But no doubt he's now with Annie—
"He may stay-there, too, for me!
And as true as I am living,
If he ever comes hore more,
I will uct as if we never,
Never, never met before. It is time he should be coming,
And I wonder if he will,
If he does. I'll look so coldly—
: Whit's that shadow on the kill?
I declare out in the twillight
There is some one coming near—
Can it be? yes, 'tis his figure,
Just as true as I am here!

Now, I almost wish I'd written
Not to him that he was free,
For perhaps, 'twas but a story
That he rode with Annie Lee. There he's coming through the gateway, I will meet him at the door. And I'lttell him still I love him, If he'll court Miss Lee no more!

The old man then put his hand to his bosom, and the trembling drover saw him draw forth the long blade the other had given him. For an instant the murderous weapon was poised over his head, and then descended with hissing sound upon the person of the poor wretch in the bed. Another and another stroke followed in rapid succession. A half stifled groan, a few gasping sobs escaped the dying man, a convulsive tremor of the bed-clothes, and all was quiet. The murderer paused in his bloody work for an instant, as if to satisfy bimself that life was extinct, and then with fiendish deliberation, drew down the coverlet, and to make all sure, passed the knife from ear to ear across the throat of his victim.
