A LESSON WORTH REMEMBERING.

A lesson in itself sublime, A lesson worth remembering, Is this: "I take no note of time, Save when the sun is shining."

Miscellaneous.

THE ROSE OF GLEN VALLEY.

MURDER!—Help!—Oh, help! How sharp and fearfully distinct that cry ran out on the midnight air!

or strange; but I suppose something has detained him. He will probably meet us at the church."

As Blanche passed down through the group of livered servants that lined the hall, every one anxious to catch a glimpse of the bride, many a heart blessed her sweet face, and prayed that all the bright anticipations of smiles and blushes shadowed forth might be realized.

Just as they were about to return, Lord Cantref noticed a horseman approaching at a furious pace whom he recognized as Mr. St. Croix, the young earl's cousin.

"You are prejudiced, my daughter," said her father, "I see nothing of this. Indeed I believe him to be an honorable man, and in every respect worthy of you."

"I have no heart to give you," she said in reply to his earnest protestations, "my hand is yours whenever you choose to claim it."

"Heaven grant that it may last, lady," said Marthe, solemnly. A shadow fell across the young girl's sunny face.

py home, but Cleopatra, the gipsy queen!

"I—I thought—" stammered the earl. "You thought me, as you intended me to be, dead?" she said, interrupting him with a still more bitter laugh.

"You are talking at random, woman," said the earl sternly, recovering in a measure, his self-possession. "What is that you want—money?"

"What do you mean?" he gasped. "Nay, be calm," said the woman mockingly, as she observed his agitation, "let not your craven heart fail you now."

"Let it be as you say, father," replied Lady Blanche, indifferently. Since Walter is dead, I care little what becomes of me.

"The earl had been waiting some time to see you Blanche," he continued; "may he come in and receive your consent from your own lips?"

no fitting mate for the pure and gentle Lady Blanche Cantref!

"It is false—she is mad!" said the earl, hoarsely. "Let the ceremony proceed."

"Fool!" muttered the woman, "you rush on your own destruction. Walter, Earl of Egberton, she added impressively, turning toward a man who sat in the back part of the church, muffled up in a cloak, 'come forward and prove the truth of my assertion.'"

When they lifted St. Croix from the place where he had fallen, they found that life had departed. It seems that the wounds given to the young Earl were not as his murderers supposed mortal.

Both the Earl and the Countess tried to induce Cleopatra, the gipsy queen, to settle down in the neat pleasant cottage the Earl had given her. But they could not prevail upon her to give up her roving life.

"The St. John Daily News of December 6, has an account of the sufferings of John P. Sullivan, of Hadley Falls, Mass., and his companions, deserters from the whalerships Daniel Webster and Ansel Gibbs, of New Bedford, in Cumberland Straits, on the 4th of August last."

"I proclaim Edward St. Croix, falsely called the Earl of Egberton, to be a forsworn lover; a treacherous kinsman, and murderer, and therefore ton died of starvation. The narrative of Sullivan says:

This evening he died, Samuel Fisher proposed to eat him; he took his knife and cut a piece off the thigh, and held it over the fire until it was cooked. Then, next morning each one followed his example; after that the meat was taken off the bones, and each man took a share.

The third day we stopped here, I was out as usual picking berries, or anything I could find to eat. Coming in I chanced to pick up a mushroom. I brought it in with me, while an armful of wood to keep.

When they lifted St. Croix from the place where he had fallen, they found that life had departed. It seems that the wounds given to the young Earl were not as his murderers supposed mortal.

Both the Earl and the Countess tried to induce Cleopatra, the gipsy queen, to settle down in the neat pleasant cottage the Earl had given her. But they could not prevail upon her to give up her roving life.

During the heat of the action a number of very young men had one or more fingers carried away. Hence it was insinuated that they had voluntarily wounded themselves in order to be discharged from the service.

No medical officers would be able to establish the least difference between the two kinds of wounds."
