TIRED TO DEATH!

My lady is tired to death ! And given her dear, darling poodle a hug.
And given her dear, darling poodle a hug.
And from her bay window has noticed the fall
Of a ripe usetarine from the low sunny wall; She's embroidered an inch on some delfoats lace And viewed in the mirror her elegant face, Has looked at an album, a rich bijouterie, Then restlessly owned herself dead with ennul.

And my lady is tired to death ! Exhausted! It strange that as day after day Of her frivolous life passes slowly away, so atmices and "atrilah," so empty and fire, So free from those outies sometimes called digine.
That she wearles of something; she hardly knows

Thinks of not what she is, but of all she is not ! On nel all emotions are vulgar, you know, And my lady's have always been quite comme il faut

Still, my lady is tired to death! Oh woman, false woman, false mother, false wife! What account can you give of your poor wasted life. Of that life that has passed like a feverish dream, That life that has not been to be but to seem? What account will you give in the awful, last day, When the pomp and the show of the world pass away, When the Master demands of the talents He's given, A stewardship rendered on earth and in Heaven?

lired to death! Oast off for a moment your diamonds and lace, And shine in the light of true womanly grace ; Look around you and see with eyes raised to the light Strong men and true women who live for the right; Brave hearts that ne'er falter, though distant the goal, Great lives whose fierce struggles will never be told, Whose with straying hearts stern duties control. Whose only true life is the life of the soul.

THE SHADOW KISS.

Two deep bay windows lit the room In which we watched the evening gloom; In this myself and Lucy ast, Peter and maiden sunts in that; The gaslight on the flags below And on our ceiling cast a glow.

While pater and his coterie Talked matters parliamentary, Or ruled, with solemn shake of head, Now prudently the young should wed, In my committee I said, 'This, My dearest, is the ulms to kiss!"

Lured by the shadowy hour and nook. The proffered pledge she cooly took; When, lo! by our unlacky fate, In silhouette our tete-a-tete, Noses and pouted lips were all Obliquely shadowed on the wall!

So, when the fo eman bring in tea, Sombre are they, and scarlet we; The lamb has prematurely shown A truth we had not dared to own; And yet this kiss was not our last!

A Haunted House to Let in

New York. The New York Mercury states that there is a large house up town, in the centre of the most fashionable part of Gotham, which bears the oft seen bill : "ToLet." For a long time the bill his been there at least for several months. The reason is, that the house is said to be haunted. Why the speaks should choose it for a person who next lives in it. vicinity, with not even an inviting gable, or a cozy cranny. For all that, there have happened, within its walls, such year, odd things that people are shy of occupying it. Perhaps some persons may think it all a humbug—an old woman's tale; or, maybap, an entertaining fiction; but we assure their, that such is not the case. The facts which we will now recite dispel so, one night, a party of eight proinitials of girls whose fate is yet unany such ingenious theory. Without a shadow of doubt, the house is

Several years ago, its owner, and occupant died very suddenly, and under most peculiar circumstances.-He was taking his usual morning bath, when, from some unknown cause, he was smitten with death, and lay in the room several hours ore any one sought him. His family were away at the time, and his servants did not venture to disturb him, until their misgivings were aroused by his non-appearance at breakfast. Three days after he was buried. It was subsequently found out that he had revived, and had struggled with all bis might to rid himself of the cerement, the shroud, and the coffin.-But it was all to no purpose. The matter was known to but a few, and for obvious reasons was kept a secret. We might add the unfortunate gentleman was one of our most prominent citizens, and had received no small honors at the hands of the political party to which he was attached.

Naturally, the story of the death of the last occupant clung to the house, and for a long time no one could be found to hire it. People shook their heads ominously, thought it was too dark; and some were afraid of the bath-room, it looked so grim. At holding such unpleasant opinions about the house; while such of the octales connected with it, laughed in heir sleeves at what they deemed. old woman's stories. One night-it was in the middle of winter—the neighbors were startled by strange noises apparently coming from the strange house in question, and their apprehensions were not a little heightned by the fact that the domicil was orilliantly lighted from basement to garret. All this between midnight and drawn; ugh! if was rather odd they thought. The next day, the house was vacated, and the good land.

RUSSIAN DISCIPLINE.

Having found a German friend in the head physician of the military hospital at Riga, I accompanied him one morning on his visit thither. On the way he told me how difficult it was to elicit from the men the real seat of their complaints, as every ailing in the upper part of the body, whether in the head, back, or stomach, they call pain in the heart; and those in the lower part of the body, pain in the leg-

Having arrived at the hospital, all the tor, and out it was. Turning to the next, the same question, same answer, the same ries and process.

LAUGHING PHILOSOPHER.—The author of work called "Notes of an Army Surgeon," records the following incident as really having occurred during siege of Fort Erie, in the war of 1812:

"I remember one day, in making my hospital rounds, a patient just arrived were recently thrown into a state of presented an amputated fore arm, and, in doing so could hardly restrain a broad laugh; the titter was constantly on his face. What is the matter? This does not strike me as a subject of laughter.
