

THE CORNER.

"The worst men in the Southern Confederacy" said Parson Brownlow, the other day, to an assembly of people, the preachers. When they became searsh they bid farewell to honesty, truth and decency.

"The worst men in the North" are the preachers—"Those who became political abolitionists bid farewell to honesty, truth and decency. When they of the North and the South abandoned the holiness of their profession for the strife of politics, they made themselves 'worse men' in the nation. At their door, more than any other, lays the crime of infatigating this war. They filled the hearts of their respective people with hatred, malice and all uncharitableness toward each other. Dividing first among themselves, they expected to see a great nation willing to follow their example, for the mere purpose of gratifying the passions they have created.—Chicago Times

A good anecdote is told of one of the Connecticut boys. While in conversation with a rebel, after the capture of Fort Pulaski, the latter said, "At least with all our faults, we have never made wooden nutmegs." The Yankee, a very demure-looking specimen, innocently replied: "We do not make them of wood any longer," and pointing to one of the big projectiles lying near which had breached the fort, added quietly, "we make them now of iron." Scorch subsided.

A soldier's letter in the Rochester Union, says: "When Gen. Wool first saw 'the army of the Potomac,' and what do you think was the opinion he expressed? I said he, 'General, the army of the Potomac is the dirtiest lot of men I ever saw.' Gen. McClellan replied:—'Gen. Wool, if you and your men had been in the West, you would have been you would be dirty too.'"

"Now, to see the point, I must tell you, that Gen. Wool has his men in barracks in the fort, and they have three suits of clothes, a dress suit for fine weather, another for rain and one for fatigue duty. I can't see why they should not keep clean, while the 'army of the Potomac' has only one suit and what they can carry in their knapsacks."

The other evening a humorous Republican member of the New York Legislature, wrote a note to another Republican member from an extreme western country, saying that a lady in the gallery had been attracted by the fine appearance of said member, and would like to meet him. "If the desire was mutual, the 'lady' wished the gentleman from C— to lead a newspaper in each hand, so that she could see the signal. The note having been despatched to the member, the wicked author posted all those around him, and soon half the chamber awaited the developments. The unfortunate legislator read the note, cast a sentimental glance at the ladies' gallery, seized two Tribunes and held them aloft with all due energy. A loud laugh from those around him followed. He is yet looking for "that woman."

Scene, cabin of the New World. Little boy, with a "letter in the post," eyeing old gentleman—in blue and yellow, and with a large mouth,—"Who made that slit under your nob, old feller?" Old gentleman—"Sir, you are impudent." Little boy (suggestively)—"Careless cuss, wan't he? Cut a little deeper, he'd had yer head off."

"The Life of James W. Jackson, of Alexandria," who killed the lamented Colonel Ellsworth, is announced as having just been published in Richmond.—the work will be sold for the benefit of Jackson's family.

An elderly lady who was handling a pair of artificial plumes in a dental office, and admiring the fluency with which the dentist described them, asked him, "Can a body eat with these things?" "My dear madam; mastication can be performed by them with a facility scarcely excelled by nature herself," responds the dentist. "Yes, I know; but can a body eat with 'em?" replied the woman.

"Mr. Van Buren," said a dedicated client, "is there any client so low and mean, or any case so nasty, that you won't undertake to defend him in it?" "I don't know," said John, pausing to put away another oyster; then bending down, and confidentially drawing out his reply in the little man's ear—"what have you been doing?"

It is said that a man in "a tight place" once, upon having his note shamed by a broker begged to be allowed to take bill papers as it is, the publishers had better let the government have their newspapers, if it will permit them to receive the taxes.

"This war affects some of us rather severely," said a wag on a street corner the other day. "There goes a man who has lost half his worth since the Spring, in consequence of it." "Who? what? how?" exclaimed the sympathizing listener. "Why, that little black fellow with the wheelbarrow was worth a thousand dollars down south before the war began, but now the value of negroes is so reduced that he wouldn't bring half off!"

All the stay-laws in the world couldn't make the rebel armies stay at any point which the Union armies are approaching.

A lady asked a pupil at a public examination of the Sunday School—"What was the sin of the Pharisees?"—"Eating camels, marm," quickly replied the child. She had read the Pharisees, "Strained at gnats and swallowed camels."

When the Cardinals wished to read a gentle hint to the gay and literary Leo X., they caused a fry of straw to be let before him. "Thus quickly feet the vanities of the world" cried a warning voice, as the flame shot up. "But while it passes let us warm our hands at it," retorted the Pope, holding out his palms to the fire.

When a wise man plays the fool woman is generally at the bottom off.
