

HOME AFFAIRS.

Why John, where are you going in such a hurry?

Why, I am going to Lebanon, in Market street, to buy a lot of Furniture.

John, you can't tell me the reason why Lebanon sells so much more Furniture and Chairs than all the other cities in Lebanon together?

Yes, John, I think I can tell that reason very plainly. He has always got by the largest and best assortment of all kinds of Furniture and Chairs on hand.

As the 93d Regiment will leave for the seat of war this week, the public will please bear in mind that the best and most desirable FURNITURE ESTABLISHMENT in Lebanon, is that of G. BROWN & CO.

EXEMPTION BONDS. Just printed and for sale at the Advertiser Office.

Our old friend H. Ristenbatt has removed his Coach-making establishment to the old location, near the corner of Cumberland St. and Plank-road.

A certain man in this county was lately preaching up his abolition doctrines, when he was asked what he would do with the slaves when they came here. "Kill them," said he.

The following letter was received last week by the Post Mistress at this place, and is published for the purpose of obtaining the desired information.

Yesterday a fatal accident happened on the P. & W. R. R. to a soldier by the name of Minnie Arnold, of Capt. Huston's Comp., 5th Penn. Infantry.

THE PROBLEM OF THE DAY.—A loyal man's catechism in this day reads somewhat thus: What is the duty of the American Patriot in the present crisis?

To save the Union and the Constitution. Why is the Union and Constitution in danger? Because a large number of the citizens of the United States at the South have rebelled against both, and a large number at the North have called them a league with death and a covenant with hell.

There can be no possible doubt that it is more practicable to make a good Union man out of a secessionist, than out of a Northern nineteen year secessionist. There is a close resemblance between the two classes in their modes of reasoning and acting, and both are uncompromising hostility to the Constitution.

The Southern Rebel is a reasoning man, while the Northern rebel refuses to listen to reason. The Southerner may, after becoming convinced that the Constitution is too strong for him, abandon his resistance and relapse into good citizenship, but the Northern rebel regards the Union as a league with death and a covenant with hell and refuses on principle to eat sugar or wear cotton that is grown upon the protection of such a Union.

The Southerner is proud of Washington and regards with reverence the counsels of the fathers. The Northern secessionist teaches that Washington sinned grievously in the formation of the Union, and regards the fathers as counseling with Satan when they made their "League with hell," and one of this class said in a public speech in New York a few days ago that Satan made the Constitution.

This is to-day the dark cloud on our national prospects. A war is raging in the land. The government on the one hand, supported by the loyal sentiment of the nation, is engaged in a contest with millions of rebels who have struck at the Constitution.

Two great parties may thus be said to exist. The rebels on the one side, the loyal men on the other. But a third party exists, which is to-day praying for the vengeance of heaven on both contestants, unless the loyal men shall overthrow the Constitution. We do not mistake this fact. The prayers of the abolitionist leaders stand recorded, and the curses which they have invoked on the government if it shall restore the Union as it was, are known to all men.

These men indeed profess loyalty, but admit that their loyalty is only conditional. They are loyal if we will abolish slavery, disloyal if we refuse. Thus the loyal Union-severer stand between the two fires, on the North and on the South, and the enemies good Union men seems too great for accomplishment.

The great block in the way of the Union to-day is abolitionism. Sweep it away, and in four weeks the rebel military power would be destroyed and the people of the South would hang their own leaders in treason. Without roving abolitionism, we can only expect to rot with it and overcome it. The hope of the Union therefore is to unite the entire conservative force of the country and drive the abolitionist disunionists into obscurity. Rebellion will force of arms. Rebellion with the tongue of hatred to the Constitution can then be disposed of by the voice of the people.

OBITUARY.—Decesse of Hon. Chas. Jared Ingersoll.—On Wednesday morning, the 14th inst., at 2 1/2 o'clock, expired at his residence in Philadelphia, the Hon. Charles J. Ingersoll, in the 80th year of his age.

Thus has passed away a gentleman alike distinguished as a patriot, statesman, lawyer and scholar. Mr. Ingersoll was a member of the Congress of 1812, and was one of those fearless men that dared to vindicate their country against the aggressions of Great Britain. His pen and tongue were both eloquent in the cause. He held the office of United States District Attorney under Mr. Adams, and was subsequently elected to Congress during the Administration of Mr. Polk. He was a leading member of the Democratic party, a thorough patriot, and a statesman who always vindicated the honor and best interests of his country.

He was a learned constitutional lawyer and an erudite scholar. In early life he was the author of "Inchiquin's Letters"—a production of great eloquence and ingenuity, and which breathes that true love of his native land that always distinguished this gentleman. Mr. Ingersoll's mind was eminently statistical, and his productions in this line are distinguished by their research and profundity.

His "History of the War of 1812" breathes the same spirit of love of country, and bids fair to become a standard work in our literature. No mind could be more cultivated and accomplished, as his writings and speeches testify. He was a most able and interesting orator, ennobling attention by the fecundity of his matter and the depths of his remarks, and the deliberate and polished elegance of his language.

span of years lengthened to an extreme old age by his habits of abstemious regularity. Philadelphia may be proud of having produced so marked a man, who, in whatever position he has been placed, has shown his traits of profound learning and brilliant intellect.

He was, emphatically, a great man, and his memory belongs to history, and will be long cherished by his countrymen.

Letter from Major Jack Downing.

To the Editor: I've been kinder sick since I wrote you last. The truth is, this climate in the spring is really very weakish to the constitution.
