THE CORNER.

How Napoleon Punished Swindling in his Army.-Napoleon secured the respect, confidence, and it might be said afing instance of his summary mode of punishment of vallains in his army is brought to mind by the Chicago Tribune, with a suggestion that it be initiated in the Fed-suggestion that it be initiated in the Federal army.

"Just before the great battle of Wagnam, while the army was encamped on the Island of Lobau, near Vienna, Napoleon walking one day with one of his Marshal's on the shore, passed a company of grenadiers seated at their dinner—

"Well, my friends,' said he, 'I hope you find the wine good?' 'It will not make us drunk,' replied one, 'there is our cellar,' pointing to the river Danube. The Emperor, who had ordered a bottle of wine to each man, was surprised, and made an immediate inquiry. He found that forty thousand bottles sent by him a few days before, for the army, had been purloined and were unaccounted for by the Commissaries. They were immediately bro't to trial and condemned to be shot, which sentence was speedily carried into execution. Here was a venal offence, 'insignificant, indeed, when compared with the frauds upon the urgent wants and necessities of our soldiers, recently brought to light the transport of the stream of the sentence of more that twelve years, in school of harmat white a trady of that tardy of that the logand to the landy of the hard of the sandy of the name of the sandy of the arm of reactions, will be drawn and niferant sections of the Union, will be drawn and illegrate sections of the Institute at any point in the Island of Lobau, near Vienna, Napoleon the Island of the Island is gentle intime. The Island is gentle intim sities of our soldiers, recently brought to light, but it received a severe and merited punishment. A few such examples in our army would do a world of good.

Hog Strategy.—The feeding of soldiers on pork seems to have a philosophy in it. It is the meat of the best tactician among brute animals. Silliman's Journal gives the following curious illustration of this: "A gentleman, while traveling some years ago through the wilds of Vermont, perceived at a little distance before him a herd of swines, and his attention was arrested by the agitation they exhibited.— He quickly perceived a number of young pigs in the centre of the herd, and that the hogs were arranged about them in a conical form, having their heads all turned outwards. At the apex of this singular cone a huge boar had placed himself, who, from his size, seemed to be the master of the herd. The traveler now observed that a famished wolf was attempting, by various manœuvres, to seize on the pigs in the middle; but whenever he made an attack, the huge boar at the apex of the cone presented himself-the hogs dexterously arranging themselves on each side of him, so as to preserve the position of defence just mentioned. The attention of the traveler was for a moment withdrawn, and upon turning to view the combatants, he was surprised to find the herd of swine-dispersed, and the wolf no longer to be seen. On riding up to the spot, the wolf was discovered dead on the ground, a rent being made in his side more than a foot in length—the boar, no doubt, having seized a favorable opportuloubt, having seized a favorable opportulity, and with a sudden plunge dispatchd his adversary with his formidable tusks. It is a little remarkable that the ancient Romans, among the various methods they devised for drawing up their armies in battle, had one exactly resembling the tioned. The mode of attack was called Cuncus, or Caput porcinum."

A Rebel Air Gun Boat -A correspondent from Jaffrie's creek sends pondent from Jaffrie's creek sends the Charleston Mercury the following suggestion, which it publishes in its editorial columns, with the comment that it "certainly possesses the merit of intense originallity:"

Among the many projects for destroying the blockade, the following plan seems to me to combine less risk of life than would attend any other with an equal chance of success. Prepare a number of large iron shells. loaded with one hundred pounds of powder and a due proportion of destructive missiles. Let the shells be heavier on one side, and let this be fitted with nipples for percussion caps, commu. large iron shells. loaded with one hundred pounds of powder and a due proportion of destructive missiles. Let the shells be heavier on one side, and let this be fitted with nipples for percussion caps, communicating with the charge. Take these shells up in balloons, and when at a convenient altitute above the blockading squadron, allow them to descend upon the enemy's decks. The shells should be of sufficient weight to penetrate the deck of any vessel upon which they might be dropped. Even if this plan were impracticable upon the seas, it might serve to clear our harbors, such as Tybee and Port Royal.

A Wife's Scruples Against Raffling Overcome.—A Pittsfield man, who had won a fat turkey at a raffle, and whose pious wife was very inquisitive about his method of obtaining the poultry, satisfied her scrubles at last by the remark that "the shakers gave it to him."

revival in camp. Prayer meetings and class meetings are held almost every night. On Monday night there were five mourners. The field for operating is an extensive one, and the meetings thus organized bid fair to produce the most gratifying results:
