

THE CORNER.

A Haunted Castle. A correspondent of the Monde Illustré, Mr. Albert de Lasalle, who, besides being an author and a musician, is a grandson of the gallant Lasalle who died a general of division at the battle of Wagram, has lately written a long and curious letter describing a haunted castle where he was taken at disadvantage by ghostly visitors. As a matter of course, this letter is a great triumph for the Revue Spiritaliste, (the organ of the Spirit Rappers in France) who are in a hurry to publish it. Here is the letter: I was recently staying at the castle of F—, built upon the ruins of the ancient castle of that name, which was situated in the midst of a wild and thickly wooded country, about sixty leagues from Paris, cited by all ancient chronicles, as much as by local tradition, as a country haunted by ghosts. About ten o'clock in the evening, we were all in the parlor together, the men reading, the women at their embroidery frames, when suddenly a violent ringing was heard underneath in the parlor. A servant made his appearance: "Did Madam ring the bell?" "No, Madam." "But, Madam, it was the parlor bell." "Nobody touched it." "But listen Madam!" The bell was getting impatient; it gave a series of short rings, and then again long peals, lasting about two minutes. Upon descending into the parlor, all the bells in the house commenced ringing; even the alarm bell of the castle contributed its deep tones to this diabolical symphony. Thinking that some deception was being practised, and determined to sift the matter to the bottom, I asked permission to be considered master of the house for an hour or so. This being granted, I commenced operations by closing all the shutters, and by requesting masters and servants to come down into the room where the ringing commenced. This being done, I made a minute investigation of each room, and assured myself that the wires passed through the walls, and were consequently not out of anybody's reach. I then descended to the parlor, where the ringing had assumed the proportions of a tempest. Having espied the most violently agitated bell, I undertook to maintain it in its place by main force, but through using both hands, I was unsuccessful; besides, the bell was so hot that I could not hold it long. The castle now commenced to tremble under the blows of an army of masons, the sound of whose picks striking the stone was distinctly audible. On passing through a door, it immediately slammed to of its own accord, and at the same time the peculiar gasp of a person who is being suffocated is heard in the air. As I went up stairs, I distinctly heard the sound of an axe striking the wood between my feet at each step I took.— Stones were thrown against my shutters all night, and an invisible being, but rather heavily booted, walked the corridor near my room till morning. I rushed out with a lamp, hoping to surprise this nocturnal pedestrian, but to no purpose. I saw nothing, but I could swear that the sound passed within a yard of me. I questioned some of the most intelligent inhabitants of the place in reference to these strange occurrences. They all assured me that the castle of F— was subject to being visited by ghosts returned from the grave. His First Prize.—Some time since a supernaturally old Commodore was placed in charge of one of our navy yards. One day a poor little fellow had just filled his basket with chips, as the gout old Commodore "chove in sight" and growled out:— "Drop it, I say!" A chase ensued. The boy was small, and his load heavy, and presently the old Commodore puffing and blowing, seized the boy by the collar. Jumping away and dumping the chips at his feet, the boy exclaimed: "Take it, you darned old skinkind; it's the first prize you ever took in your life!" Aphorisms.—The law ruins men and fashion women. There is a fitness in all things except cheap clothes. It's a bad thing to grumble—the wheel isn't oiled till it cracks. A miller is but a human version of the turn spig that toiled every day to roast meat for persons eating. The Abolitionists of the town of Ripley, Ohio, have a characteristic way of showing their philanthropy. Lately they made desperate efforts, and succeeded in rescuing two negro children from their Kentucky masters, and a day or two afterwards sent two helpless white orphan children, whose father is now in the army, to the poor house. To the credit of the people of Georgetown, Ohio, these children were not permitted to enter the infirmary; they were provided with homes in families of two good Democrats of that place. An amusing incident transpired a few evenings since, at Manchester, New Hampshire, in the Huntington Street Baptist Church, on the occasion of the magic lantern exhibition. The scene of the children of Israel crossing the Red Sea was exhibited, and the small children were asked if they could tell what it represented. "One little fellow immediately sung out, 'Burnside crossing the Rappahannock!'" For some weeks past there has been quite an excitement among nervous females in Philadelphia, over a report that there is an organized band who go about the streets at night with sticking plaster in their hands and India rubber shoes on their feet, the first to put over the mouth of their victims and the last to denounce the sound of their approach till they come close enough to gag the women.—The effect has been to terrify mild women and girls, so that many of them are afraid to appear in the streets at night—and are ready to run if a man comes within a dozen rods of them in any place not well frequented.
