"Do not misunderstand me on this subject. Men have the most unlimited right to condemn, and if you please, rail at the National Administration, and object to the manner in which it couducts public affairs, but not to decry the government under which we live, or express hopes or wishes for a dissolution of the Union, the destruction or defeat of our armies, the success of the rebels or of the rebellion. * * * The Arministration he may entirely condemn; the Government he is bound to support. Parties will always exist in every free country, and whether men will sustain or oppose a particular administration. is one in which there should ever be the most perfect freedom of opinion, but no man er set of men has any right, natural or political, te overturn the government itself. He is bound to support and sustain it, let who will administer its affairs, until the ruler can be changed under the provisions of the Constitution. These certainly can be no difficulty, with persons of ordinary intelligence drawing the distinction between sustaining the government itself, and sustaining or opposing those who temporarily administer its affairs. The latter is a question of party, the former of opadriotsms." ter is a question of party, the form-of patriotism?
