Cr President Lincoln rides about Washington under an armed escort of cavalry. His carriage is constantly preceeded and followed by a force of horsemen large enough to attract attention e ven in a military European capital: How like the imperial pomp of foreign monarchs! James Buchanan and his predecessors back to Washington, always walked unattended and alone.

When Dr. Franklin last visited, London, he was one day walking its streets, with a pair of spectacles on his nose, belonging to a friend. He wore them pretending, in badinage, that they would help his eyes. Passing along a crowded street, a rude porter ran against him: 'D-n your spectacles!' said the coarse fellow; when the Doctor, turning to his companion, laughing heartily, said:

There, my fri nd. you see what I said was true for if I had not had the speciacles on, he would have d-n my eyes."
