NOT ALCOHOLIC. Three Simple Men

A HIGHLY CONCENTRATED OF THE EAST. A Story From Which A Moral Can Be Extracted.

The following story was heard by its present narrator, in Ceylon:

In Lundy, during the days of Ceylon, on a pleasant, cool December evening, three strong men were sitting in a rest-house, or ambulatory, that is, a small open building raised for the benefit of travellers by some pious person, in accordance with the saying of Buddha, that the gods reward such works of charity.

As the men sat in the glow of the sun-set, a middle-aged widow, in deep mourning, came by. The three men rose and bowed to her. She also made a bow to them.

"That bow was for me," said one of the men. "No," said the second, "it was mine." "No," said the third, "it was to me she bowed." They quarreled over the matter for some time, but at last agreed that it would be better to run as fast they could after the widow, and ask her to which of her sons she bowed. They did so, reached her out of breath, gasped at their question, and the only answer they got was, "To the greatest simpleton among you."

Then they returned to the rest-house calmly, but only to quarrel again.

"Did I not tell you," said one, "that she bowed to me? I am the greatest simpleton here." "No," said each of the other two, "I am more of a simpleton than you." They quarreled for some time, and from words coming to blows, they quarreled till they were stopped by the police, who locked them up for the night in separate cells, and carried them next day before a judge. The judge, having heard the cause of dispute, called upon one of the men to produce evidence for his claim to be so great a simpleton.

"My lord," said he, "when I was a- bout eighteen years old, my father and mother set eyes on a young woman whom they chose to be my wife. They thought she would be faithful, industrious, and thrifty. She was expected, also, to inherit a few fields. She was of the same caste as ourselves, and of good family. Proposals, therefore, were made and accepted, and, soon afterwards, according to the custom of the country, I had to visit my future mother-in-law, to do so by the strict rules of society, and by some contrived excuse, my intended wife would show her face to me. I had far to travel, and starting at midnight, arrived late in the evening, when I was most cordially received, and most kindly requested to stay for the night, and return home next day. To this I consented, and all seeming reluctance, although it had been the object of my journey, and I was fully persuaded that a glance at my future partner in the cool of the morning would be better than one in the dusk of the evening. I had an excellent dinner, and slept soundly under a roof which I had already regarded as my own. In the morning I awoke refreshed, and went out doors to wash myself, as usual.

I found, of course, awaiting me, a brazen pot full of water for washing my face, hands, and feet, as well as a piece of charcoal for cleaning my teeth. I finished my ablutions soon, and, on looking back, observed a beautiful young woman, who sat at some distance from me, washing rice for my morning meal. Her embarrassed air, and some smiles which stole over her face almost against her will, easily told me that she was my betrothed; and I, in defiance of our customs, quietly went near, and spoke to her as there was nobody in sight. She was not so shy as to leave her work and run away, but stayed, and returned short modest answers to my questions. At length, I went very close to her, tapped her on the shoulder, and, playfully, taking up a handful of the rice she was washing, had just put it into my mouth, when, to our utter confusion, her mother made her appearance. I quickly removed myself to a respectable distance, but had not time to bite or swallow the rice, and so was obliged to keep it in my mouth and chew it. In the next moment, my wife started up and cried, 'Ah, you got only one cake!' Our neighbors were surprised at this performance of the corpse; but when my wife, in great gloe, boasted of her victory, and explained herself, they laughed at us uproariously, and told us that we were both of us the great simpletons they ever heard of."

The judge settled the claims of the three simpletons, thus: "You are really three very great simpletons, and it is not easy to decide which of you ought to get the bow. The first, however, suffered not only from his folly, but on account of his love, and because he had not observed the approach of the doctor with the red-hot iron hook. The second suffered because he committed a mistake, and his wives took unjust advantage of it. But the third suffered starvation, solely because of his foolishness, and is therefore the greatest simpleton."

In the present quarrel, however, all three have been equal simpletons in fighting for so worthless a thing as a passing stranger's bow."

One of our exchanges asks what we shall do, with butter at thirty cents per pound? We modestly keep me silent. I sat mute with astonishment at the position to which I had reduced myself, until the doc-

Speech of Hon. Myer Strouse

Delivered in the House of Representatives of the United States, May 22, 1864, on the Bill, "To Guarantee to certain States, whose Governments are Usurped or Overthrown, a Republican Form of Government," known as the "Reconstruction Bill."

M. STROUSE. Mr. Speaker, I do not clearly understand what is meant by "reconstruction," but I do know that some immediate healing paracetamol is demanded of those who have sworn to be the defenders and protectors of the Union, or the "Union" will exist only in theory, or as a matter of fact.

The act of secession of the Southern States was pronounced as treason by jurists and statesmen; and when the rebellion first assumed shape and form by its armed hosts in the field to make war upon the Government of the United States, the people of the North, with one voice and in general accord declared against this most wicked and monstrous outrage. Men of all parties, of all sections, from all localities, went forth to maintain and defend the Union and the Constitution to preserve and uphold the integrity and entirety of our Government.

No conscription act was necessary; no forced draft was required to raise an army to bear aloft the flag of the Union against secessionists and traitors. No bounties and extra pay and extraordinary inducements were wanted to obtain volunteers for the Army of the Republic. But, Mr. Speaker, "tempora mutantur, nos et mutamur in illis." It is scarcely three years that the citizens of the North, the East, and of the West, singly, in companies, and in battalions, applied willingly, urgently, and most patriotically to the authorities to be permitted to enter the military service in defence of the old flag. No extraneous inducements or pecuniary stimulants were needed to arouse the patriotism of the people to rush to the tented field. Men of all classes, of all climes, of all creeds, of all conditions, the citizens by birth and the citizens by adoption, left the peaceful walks and avocations of life at the first blast of the clarion of war.

How is it now? Why this marvelous change? What has wrought this apathy and indifference, this positive aversion in the minds of men to volunteer? The rebellion still exists. The enemy armed and equipped, is still at our door. Many towns, forts, and public places are still in the hands of the rebels. The authority of the United States is still defied and ignored. The strife, which was then confined to a narrow circle, has assumed the proportions of the greatest war of ancient times. Are the American people less patriotic in 1864 than they were in 1861? Have we not the same at stake, and is not the country still in greater danger of dismemberment? Surely there is yet much danger, and we must not underrate the enemy's strength nor doubt his prowess. I would ask, then, why is it that almost every man in the community, fit for military duty is devising "ways and means" to avoid the draft? We retain it is, that some great change has come over the spirit of the dreams of the people. The change, sir, is founded on the fact that the war has been, and is now, perverted from its original object. Independent of and apart from all the "pomp and circumstance" attending the re-enlistment of the brave and gallant veterans and the volunteering of men under the liberal operation of national, State, and local bounties, it cannot be denied that the eager desire of the citizens to join the Army, freely and voluntarily, exists no more. The House of Representatives in 1861, immediately after the first Ball Run disaster, almost unanimously resolved,

"That this war is not waged in any spirit of aggression for any purpose or conquest or subjugation, or purpose of overthrowing or interfering with the rights or established institutions of these States, but to defend and maintain the supremacy of the Constitution, and to preserve the Union, with all the dignity, equality, and rights of the several States unimpaired, and that as soon as these objects are accomplished the war ought to cease."

This, Mr. Speaker, was statesmanship. This was the talisman that aroused our people to renewed energies and efforts. The solemn declaration of the popular branch of Congress that the purpose of the war was solely to defend and maintain the supremacy of the Constitution and to preserve the Union with all the dignity, equality, and rights of the several States unimpaired, made us a band of brothers in the North, and held out strong hopes of relief to the suffering Union men of the South.

There was no division of opinion among the men of the North at the time, whatever their previous political predilections may have been. So many volunteers offered their services during the autumn of 1861 that the Chairman of the Military Committee of the Senate declared that recruiting and volunteering must be stopped.

This rush to arms by the patriotic citizens who left all home-comforts, parents, wives, children, occupation, everything behind them; was in pursuance of the sublime declaration I have just quoted. Other and further assurances were given by Mr. Lincoln by members of his Cabinet, and by high officials in the confidence of the President, that the laws and local institutions of the States should remain unimpaired.

It is unnecessary to prove that the pledged faith of the Administration in this matter has been most wantonly violated and disregarded? It is patent to all that the object of the

Particular Notice

There are many preparations sold under the name of Bitters, put up in quart bottles, compounded of the cheapest whiskey or common rum, costing from 20 to 40 cents per gallon, and the most objectionable of our countrymen.

This class of Bitters has caused and will continue to cause, as long as they can be sold, hundreds to die the death of the drunkard. By their use the system is kept constantly under the influence of Alcohol. The elements of the worst kind, the desire for liquor is created and kept up, and the result is the ruin of the individual, and the loss of his family.

For those who desire and will take a Bitter, they should be careful to get the one which is called "Three Quarts of Good Bitter" or "Whiskey," and the result will be a preparation that will cure the most obstinate cases of indigestion, and will give the system a new lease of life. It is the only Bitter that will cure the most obstinate cases of indigestion, and will give the system a new lease of life.
