I'm sure he mistook my the stable, I heard some one walking mortal fear for auxiety to wait for back home with her. Yes! all the top; he drank it in a few mouthsful, stand and said: and in a few minutes more he was every now and then stamping his foot as if he wanted to be off right away.

We were almost up the hill, and I there with them for a little while for thing with him, only not leave him there with him to do any thing with him, only not leave him the with him to do any thing with him only not leave him the with him to do any thing with him to do a bride to his mother. Well, she lived worse than ever. He begged me to Lord, to come foward and be prayed in that state; toward evening he became quite out of his mind; water and springs was all he raved about. So they had her confirmed instead. He lay that way for some time, almost until morning, when he got into a high fever. I got alarmed, and told the gipsy I thought it had gone as I liked, but if I would leave him we will quit." my time was come:

"With a yell of rage which caused one day, maybe just about this time or the doctors were right. spoonful of water to drink; it actualy hissed in his mouth. She kent him confined that day and half the next before she let him free, gradually increasing his allowance of water." Such is the story told by Mr. Charles Mulock, and although I am not personally acquainted with the gentleman, I am informed that he is one of the last men in the country to tell a wilful untruth. One fact however, is clear-his brother has completely recovered his health, and not ful than my own, he pulled up the strange creatures, and that they can only his health, but his flesh, and now mare so suddenly that it threw her talk just as well as we if they only weighs 160 pounds, his former weight being only 73 pounes. The lizards are of a bottle-green color, about five inches long, red eyes, and forked tongues. There is a peculiarity about them different from the ordinary lizard tribe, there being only two feet and sloping from thence in a wedge into a tail. Two of them have been preserved in spirits and forwarded to Prof. Agassiz, of Harvard University. One is preserved in spirits and is kept in Mr. Ferguson's office, and the other two were forwarded to emaciation. Medical assistance was Prof. Jack, who has written to a legal gentleman here to say that those are the only specimens he ever met with, with the exception of one found in the Museum of the University of valid, named Charles, thus describes | Munich, that is called the Lacerta homo in the language of the schools; and the Munich specimen was supposed to be the only one extant, although it is well known to the ancients. "The description given by Pythagoras," says he, "I have read with your specimens before me, and I have yet failed to discover in any respect the slightest difference in their formation or color."
