ORIENTAL STORY TELLERS

Travelers in Persia, China and Japan tell us of professional story tellers and tradition reciters, who, standing in the streets and market-places. tell marvelous tales to all who may choose to listen. The following is one of their Chinese parables:

Fohi, in the course of his wanderings, coming to a village, knocked at the door of a rich woman, and begged permission to enter. "What !" said she, "do you think I receive into my house every roving vagabond? No, indeed, it would be unbefitting a respectable woman—ge your way!" Then he went to the cottage of a poor weman, who at once kindly begged him to enter. She set before him the only food she had—a little goat's milk—broke a piece of bread into it, and said: "May Fohi bless it, that we may both have enough!" She then prepared for him a couch of straw; and when he fell asleep, perceiving that he had no shirt, she sat weman, who at once kindly begged up all night and made him one out of some linen she had made by her own bard labor; in the morning she brought it to him, begging he would not despise her poor gift. After breakfast she accompanied him a little way, and at parting Fohi said: "May the first work you undertake last until evening!" When she got home she began to measure her linen, to see how much was left : and she went on measuring, and did not come to the end until the evening, when her house and yard were full of linen; in short, she did not know what to do with her wealth. Her rich neighbor, solved that such good fortune should not escape her again. After some months the traveler came once more

A RAT STORY.

A neighbor, whose statements are entitled to implicit confidence, relates a story of the cunning and intelligence of a rat, which is truly remarkable. Being plagued with the depredations of the rodent mammels he made vari ous attempts to secure the representatives of this small race of quadrupeds. The trap used was a wire one, and so constructed that, on a rat entering and nibbling at the bait, the trup would spring and cage the intruder. Our neighbor, when he went to examine his trap, always found it sprung, but no rat, and, what was the strangest of all, the bait gone. So he resolved to watch the trap. His patience was presently rewarded by beholding half a dozen rats making their apperance, and at their head one who appeared to be a leader .-This rat advanced slowly and cautiously towards the trap, and when the others would make a move as if intending to rush at the bait, the old fellow would wag his tail and they would fall behind him. After viewing the trap closely, the old fellow approached the back part of it shook the raised part until the trap sprung, and then put a paw through one of the openings between the wires, and taking the bait he made good his retreat with his booty.-Norfolk Old Dominion.

TWO BEAUTIES OF SIXTY YEARS AGO. Mrs. Gunnings consulted Sheridan as to what she should do with her two beautiful but penniless daughters. He recommended that they should be presented at the castle. Here a great difficulty occurred; by what possible means were they to procure court dresses? This Sheridad obviaated; he was at that time manager of the Dublin Theatre, and offered them a loan of the stage dresses of Lady Macbeth and Juliet. In these they appeared most lovely; and Sheridan, after having attended the toilet, claimed a salute from each as his reward. Very soon after this, a most diabolical scheme was formed by some unprincipled young men; they invited Mrs. Gunning and her two daughters to dinner, and infused; daughters to dinner, and infused atrong narcotics in the wine, intend ing to take advantage of the intoxic distribution at 1.50 A. M., and published at 1.50 A. M., and cation which must ensue to carry off at request to and from all points. The two young women. Fortunatelyte by Bunda Beggage allowed each passenger. Sheridan discovered their base de the state of the st signs, and arrived just in time to rescue the ladies. He lived to see one of these girls Duchess of Argyle and the other Countess of Conventry, and it is melancholy to add lived to see his application for admission to their parties rejected. 🗸
