

The Carbon Advocate.

H. V. MORTIMER, EDITOR. LEHIGHTON, PA. SATURDAY MORNING JANUARY 3, 1874.

The jury in the case of Maggie Jordan, charged with assisting Sharkey to escape from the Tombs, in New York, were unable to agree, and have been discharged.

It is understood that Minister Cushing will offer Spain the good offices of our government for the pacification of Cuba. Among the reforms suggested to that end will be the abolition of slavery in the Antilles. He will also negotiate a new commercial treaty with Spain.

The examination of the Virginus prisoners was concluded on Monday evening, and they were then released and taken care of by their Cuban friends. About thirty-five of them remained in charge of the Cuban Junta at New York. They adopted resolutions thanking Commander Braine and the other officers of the Juniata, and also resolved that they would attend the funeral of Captain Braine's child.

Knight, the engineer of the Virginus, states that the original sentence of the Virginus captives was that they should all be hanged at the yard-arm. The captain of the Isabel La Católica, however, "did not wish such a spectacle made of his ship," and had the sentence changed to shooting, and, in case of the crew, to the chain gang. Knight and three others were sentenced to the chain gang for life, and the rest of the crew to eight and four years' terms of hard labor in the same gang.

The engineers' strike on the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago and Cleveland & Pittsburgh Railroads is over. The men went to work under the reduction this morning, and all passenger and freight trains are now running regularly, and a few local freight trains. The strike is now considered over. A reduction of ten per cent. also took effect on the Pennsylvania Central and Allegheny Valley Railroads January 1.

The engineers of the New York division of the Pennsylvania Railroad (186 in number) have also agreed to accept the proposed reduction, but will present a remonstrance to President Thompson, asking when business revives that their wages be raised to former rates.

A careful Washington correspondent writing in reference to the bankrupt law now pending with the Senate Judiciary Committee, says the more objectionable features of the present law relating to involuntary bankruptcy will be repealed, but that a compulsory system of adjudications will be continued, conferring the power to make a case on at least half of the creditors in both number and value, or value alone. The same writer further says the Senate will probably apply the amendment to pending cases, which application will operate notably in favor of private bankers who have been thrown into bankruptcy. The intention is, further, to modify the parts relating to voluntary bankruptcy as to reduce the fees and to adjust the law to the lessened severity of the involuntary clauses. These alterations, it is said, the Senate will insist upon as against repeal of the act, and the House can either take this sort of a compromise or the law as it stands.

General Sherman, in conversation on the subject of the cost of the military establishment, a few days ago, remarked that there was a very wrong impression in this matter both in Congress and in the public journals. The estimates for the military establishment for the next fiscal year are thirty-five millions. This includes not only the army proper but the engineer and ordnance departments, the pay of general service men who are mere clerks, the armament to fortifications, and other matters not connected with the personnel of the army proper, aggregating in all about ten millions. The General dissents entirely from the policy of spending so much money in fortifications, and thinks one million judiciously spent would be of far more benefit than the annual outlay of four millions. He does not believe in erecting permanent fortifications at unimportant points, where earth works, which will answer all purposes, can be hastily thrown up and admirably defended, as was shown at Fort Fisher and Charleston during the late war. In important harbors, he thinks, a permanent and elaborate system of defense should be maintained.

Ladies in delicate health should go to Colorado. The case of Mrs. Dexter shows the wonderful restorative effects of the climate. She could not even sweep her room when she lived in this vicinity, but in less than a year after her arrival in the territory she chased her husband a mile and a quarter with a pitchfork.

Sinking of the Virginus.

New York, Dec. 30.—Lieutenant-Commander Howell, executive officer of the Osage, says: "The Osage left the Tortugas with the Virginus in tow on the morning of the 19th inst., as already reported. They had fair weather until the afternoon of Saturday, the following day, when a gale sprang up.

They continued to have bad weather, like that encountered by the Juniata, and the Virginus signalled that she was leaking badly. Captain Walters, commander of the Osage, therefore determined to shape his course for Charleston, S. C., but as they got into smoother water the Virginus behaved better, and the water was kept out of her fire-room. On the morning of Christmas Day, however, severe weather having continued, the Virginus was leaking as badly as ever, and the vessels put into Frying Pan shoals, about ten miles south of Cape Fear light, where smoother water could be obtained. Here the vessel came to anchor, Captain Walters hoping that the Virginus would ride out the gale. Before daylight next morning (Friday) Commander Woodrow signalled with lights that the Virginus was leaking rapidly, with fires out and pumps stopped, and that the crew wished to be taken off. Boats were lowered from the Osage at daylight, and by 7 o'clock a. m. all on board the Virginus were transferred to the former vessel. As a heavy sea was running the work of removing the crew was one of much danger and difficulty, and, therefore, no lives were risked in endeavoring to save their personal effects or any other property on the Virginus. The hawser of the Virginus was cut, and a buoy attached to mark her position, in case she sank out of sight. The Osage remained at anchor during the day, and at quarter past 4 o'clock p. m., the Virginus, which had been gradually settling, went to the bottom.

She sank in eight fathoms of water, and her topmast remained above the surface. The Osage then resumed her voyage to this port. Her supply of coal was ample, twenty-five tons still remaining on board. All on board the Osage are well. She will proceed to the Navy Yard either to-day or tomorrow, after discharging her powder. Captain Walters has made a written report, which will be forwarded to Washington at once. The released captives of the Virginus still remain at the Cuban restaurant on Pine street, and the scene there this morning was one of great enthusiasm. Resolutions were adopted tendering thanks to Captain Braine, of the Juniata, for his kindness, and expressing sympathy with him in the loss of his son. It was also resolved that the ex-captives should attend the funeral of his child in a body.

News of the Week.

It is proposed now to make Lincoln's birthday, February 12, a national holiday.

Genet is either in Canada, or on the ocean sailing or somewhere else, the New York reporters don't know which.

Ishmael Day, one of the "Old Defenders," died in Baltimore on Saturday evening last, at the age of eighty-three years. At the time of the raid of Harry Gilmore into Maryland in July, 1864, Mr Day was living on his farm in Baltimore county, and acquired national notoriety by shooting a Confederate soldier who attempted to haul down a United States flag floating over Mr. Day's residence. Soon after his house, with its contents, was burned. Subsequent to this occurrence Mr. Day was appointed inspector of the Baltimore Custom House, which position he held until his death.

Madrid, Dec. 29.—It is asserted on high official authority that President Castelar has decided to press the claim of Spain for the restitution of the United States of the steamer Virginus, and also to claim the payment of indemnity by the United States to Spain for permitting the Virginus to be fitted out in an American port and sent on a filibustering expedition against a Spanish colony. This course of action, it is understood, has been decided upon after an exhaustive consideration of the whole case by the Cabinet. It is believed here that this new phase of the difficulty will reopen the whole question for fresh and probably lengthy negotiations between the two governments before it is finally settled.

Elmita, Dec. 28.—A young woman, a music teacher, of this city, was recently suffering from typhoid fever, and became to all appearance dead. The attending physician pronounced life extinct, and the remains were taken to Hornellsville for burial. At the grave, when the coffin lid was removed to allow the friends to take a last look at the remains, the body was found in a state of perspiration and still warm. Measures were at once taken to restore consciousness, but without avail, although signs of life were visible for several hours afterward.

Washington, Dec. 29.—To-night three roughs entered the restaurant of William Hile, a German, on Delaware avenue, between J. and K streets, Northeast, and asked for drinks; being refused, they assaulted and beat the wife of Hile, who, in response to her cries for help, entered the bar-room with a double barreled shotgun, and fired at which he was discharged. The contents struck his wife in the back of the head, instantly killing her. The roughs then fled, pursued by Hile, who fired the other load, wounding one of them in the shoulder. Hile went to the station house and gave himself up. The three roughs were arrested.

Philadelphia, Dec. 31.—Godfried Kuhnle, a German baker on Frankford road, below Girard avenue, was murdered this morning in his bake house by his young German apprentice, known as Fritz. Kuhnle was killed by a blow of a shovel while leaning into a barrel of flour, death being instantaneous. Fritz then went into Mrs. Kuhnle's room and attempted to strangle her, but she waking up a struggle ensued. He beat her and pushed her under the bed, believing her to be unconscious. He then robbed the bureau of all the money it contained, and changed his clothes in an upper room, Mrs. Kuhnle reviving, locked her door and alarmed the neighbors, but the murderer escaped from the house. He was afterward captured. He gave his name as Frederick Heiderfrit, and confessed his guilt. The money stolen was found on him.

A man representing himself to be a Pennsylvanian, named John Cawley, was lynched at Cimarron, New Mexico, on Monday night, for murdering a cattle dealer and robbing him of $12,000.

Hile, the saloon keeper, who accidentally killed his wife, in Washington, on Monday night, while attempting to defend her from assault, was discharged from custody Tuesday. The ruffians who assaulted her have been committed for trial.
