On Saturday evening last, in Beaver Meadow, a man named Nell McBride was brutally murdered in the main street, in front of the hotel of Peter Schwab. McBride had been attending a funeral in the atternoon, and, with friends, had stepped into Schwab's in the evening. While there a few words passed between him and three or four others, which resulted in nothing, apparently; but when Neil left the house for home, which he did about eight o'- clock, it appears the party with whom he had words followed him out and at-tacked him with billy or cub. His skull and broken in two places. It is supposed four men were engaged in the as-ant. Two of the suspected parties have been arrested; the other two, at this writing, are at large Mc leaves a widow and tour children. McBride community are greatly excited over the event.—Hazloton Daily News.

Terrible Railroad Accident.

SLATE DAM, Feb. 16 - About 1 o'clock this morning an accident occurred on the Lehigh and Susquehanna Rallroad, at or near Slate Dam station, be tween one and two o'clock, by which one or more men have lost their lives, a large amount of property has been destroyed, and several person have sustained serious and perhaps fatal injuries.

A freight train heavily laden, runring at a high rate of speed ran into a land slide which had completely blocked the track, a large mass of rock and earth loosened by the late rains having fallen from the cut across the road.

The engine jumped the track and hangs over the bank of the river. Eighteen cars by the force of the hock were thrown from the track and piled on each other, smashing freight of all descriptions, which was strewn along the road and hurled into the river. Not one of the train hands as far as we could learn, escaped without some injury. The body of the Engineer, Daniel Shenton, is not yet found; is supposed by some to be in the river, and by others to be under the tender.

O to Shannon, the fireman, is very badly scalded & burned and a brakeman named Frank Ryan is badly scalded and bruised. To add to the horror of the scene the stove in the caboose set fire to the car and commulcating with some inflammable material, among the freight it quickly spread until nine cars were in flames. The scene was a wfully grand and picturesque-the cars burned six hours and the bright light reflected in the water, the deep black shadows of the mountains, the wrecked train and the gang of men seeking for the injured and endeavoring to render assistance. The nine cars and their contents are completely destroyed.

The locality of the land slide is in a deep cut v. here the road makes a sharp curve. Rising sixty or seventy feet almost perpendicular from the track is the face of the rocky cut, and over that a large mass of earth and gravel slid and proved a fatal obstruction to the approaching train. Even if the landslide had occurred in the day time the circumstances are such that the accident that the followed it would have inevitably resulted.

The train was going north, and was the through fast treight from New York and Philadelphia. The engineer Daniel Shenton, of Ashley, certainly did not see the obstruction until he was on to it. The engine ran clean through and a hundred yards beyond it before it went down the embankment on to the townsth carrying with it some cars,

A portion of the train ran on fifty yards further. Daniel Shenton went down with his engine, and his body was found under it a terwards burned to a crisp. The fireman, Shenton's step-son, was thrown on to the ice in the river, and the head brakeman jumped-both getting off with slight injuries. The corductor and the rest of the train hands escaped in ury. The earth and rocks on the track were piled up to a height of about six feet, and the train can through the pile. The wreck was most complete and disastrous, as our dispatches stated, the burning cars, the merchandise strewed round, &c., making a scene of confusion indescribable. One car was thrown into the water, and others piled over the bank or to the towpath. The unfortunate engineer's body was scarcely recognisable, every part of him being charred to a crisp except a portion of the head. His watch was found a shapeless mass of molten metal, case and works all melted together .- [Morning

Powder Explosion

On Tue-day last ex-Judge W. II. ool, a prominent citizen of Carbon county, and resident of Beaver Meadow, while engaged with his son in tearing down his old powder mill about four miles distance, which had Leen abardoned for some years, struck an iron bolt with an axe, causing a spark to fly from it, which ignited some 25 or 30 kegs of powder dust lying on the floor. Mr. Cool immediately on seeing the spark fly, s'arted with all haste towards the door, and had just passed out when he heard a terrible explosion. He was knocked down by the concussion, having his head and clothes considerably burned, but was not seriously injures. The mill was consumed in a short time. -Herald.

According to previous announcement the members and congregation of The First Presbyterian Church of this place, held a meeting in the Iron street school house, on Thursday evening last, for the purpose of accepting or rejecting the resignation of their pastor, Rev. Henry F. Mason, to be submitted to them.

After the usual services, conducted by Reys. Mason and Walker, of Rock-Ridge, the business meeting was organized by the election of Mr. Taylor as Chairman, and W L Stiles as Secretary. Mr Mason then formally tendered his resignation as paster of the First Presbyterian Church, of Lehighton. The question was raised who was justly entitled to vote upon the acceptance or rejection. After this had been settled, a lengthy discussion ensued upon the wording of the resignation, with respect to the time of its taking effect. This difficulty having been finally adjusted by mutual consent, a motion to vote by ballot was lost. It was then decided that each voter should proceed to the Secretary's desk and record his or her name and vote to be used hereafter, The voting was then proceeded with and resulted as follows:

Majority against..... We are informed that this result by no means settles the question, and that it will be laid before the Presbytery at an early date. It was evident to the most casual observer that a very large majority of those voting against Mr. M. were actual communing membersthose most acquainted with all the facts in the case; while many of those on the opposite side had never before evinced any especial interest in the church. This fact is significant, and will no doubt have weight with the body before which the case is to be tried. Another fact in this connection we think ought to be stated-on the majority side a proxy vote was allowed, while two were refused on the other. We hope for the benefit of this distracted church, that the question will soon be set at rest.

Arrested for Robbing A Room Mate. Daniel Gallagher, a resident of Beaver Meadow, was attending a wake in company with James Early, of the same place, one day lasa week, at the house of a friend, and in the course of the night Gallagher became intoxicated to such an extent that he was rendened perfectly helpless. Early, thinking a good deal of his friend, took him to his home, and stayed the remainder of the night to prevent Gallagher from doing any injury to himself and others. They went to bed together, and in the morning Early discovered that he had been robbed of $47 50, which had been in Lis possession the previous evening, and Gallagher was not to be found. Search y as made for the missing man, all to no avail and Early came to the conclusion that the man he was looking for was, in all probability, in Allentown, as Gallagher made frequent mention of the place, and said he had an intention of going there one of these days On Tuesday evening Early arrived in this city, and proceeded at once to where he was most likely to fud his friend. In looking around in the Sixth Ward, he happened to stop in at the hotel of James Gallagher, and there he saw his man intoxicated and full of money. Officer Acker being called upon, arrested Daniel and lodged him in the First Ward Station House, and upon searching his person, there was found, $1, two 50 cent notes, 10 cent note, and a five cent piece. The officer took Gallagher to Beaver Meadow on the 4.34 train on the Lehigh Val'y Railroad yesterday afternoon, where the prisoner will have a hearing.-Morning Herald.
