Letter from South California.

Rev. C. Kessler in writing to a friend in this borough, speaks as follows of some of the wonders of South Cali-

" I feel very much like a fish out of water, in a region where no snow falls and trees stay green all the year round. California pears are the best in the world-they melt in one's mouth. Grapes grow as large as plums, and can be bought for from 2 to 8 cts. per pound, and less than a cent wholesale. Pumpkins grow to from 100 to 160 lbs. each. Plums are plentier than hickorynuts in the east, and English walnuts will be as plenty in a few years. Fish are so plenty that it hardly pays to catch them. The tack-rabbit is a little more than twice as large as the ordinary hare in Pennsylvania. Ducks, geese and qualls are numerous within two miles of town. The Mexican mustang, which is about the size of a Canadian horse, can be bought for from $8 to $80; the cheap ones have, however, a habit of bucking-which means that they stand still suddenly, and theu start again in a perpendicular direction, their heels oscillating between the clouds and earth with remarkable rapidity. These are a few of the wonderful things of Southern California. The climate is like spring at present; the peach trees are blooming, also the peas. You can still see apples of last year hanging on the trees fresher and better than those which were put under cover.

"I am growing s ronger and better in health, but do not know how soon I can start for home. I long to be once more with the congregation at Lehighton, and would much prefer to sit be hind my desk in Lehighton, and look at my secolars with a greeting, than bask in this balmy air and rich warm suncured of coughs, coid, bronchitis, sore shine, but the Giver of all good ordains

The Child Himself. To the Editor of PRE CARRON Appropries Sin, - The Sunday school teacher should study child-nature. The Christian world has recognized the keen zest, the fervent and consciencious interest with which American workers in the Sunday school cause pursue all methods of work. Our permanent Sabbath gehool literature grows apace ; even now one may collect a teachers' library of no inconsiderable size and value. The thought and feeling of the church eatholic, concentrated upon the International Series, are sending forth weekly and monthly aids for the study and teaching appointed to wait upon Mr. Kistler to of God's Word, in both excellence and abundance such as the world has never seen. It is one of the most notable religious phenomena of the age. There are not too many helps. The cause is worthy of all and more -there is a great force of Christian intelligence and devotion in their using. There is not too much. But, withat, we must not for get to study the subject of our care and tell, upon whom all our methods and material are to be brought to bear-The Child Himself. The point needs merely to be raised in order to suggest its lusportance, viz : "The successful use of our acquirements and appliances must largely depend upon our knowledge of the subject of our labors." The fisherman well knows that-whether he seeks his game with angle or with net-he most understand the habits of the fish if he would seek successfully. Teachers, you are the fishers of souls of children. If you would succeed in taking them in the golden meshes of the Gospel net, you must not only know how to give the net a skillful and graceful cast, but also, so understand the preciour game that you would enclose in the hely toils, that the net shall not fall upon empty waters and return unto you vold. We may admirthat there is much of human nature, as we generally use hat term, common with child-nature. One cannot draw a picture that shall reflect the nature of all children. There will always be occasion for the study of special cases, and such situly should never be omitted. But there are some traits of character which are almost universal to children, the understanding of which, if not essential, is at least highly important to the teacher's success. I plead for the recognition and preservation of child-nature. How many a child has been sheltered from Impending panishment by that well-worn, grand-material shield of childhood, the old saying, "Children will be children." They will be, and they ought to be ! The boon of childhood is to precious to be waisted or abused or foreshortened who is favored of Heaven to dwell in contact and communion with it, for its sweetness, and openness, and simplicity are to the souls, upon whom the weight and wear of the life struggle have borne heavily, as springs in the wilderness to the emigrant.
